WOMAN-TORIALS

Gracious Manners. Women of the northern America are quick to note and admire the sweet grace and dignity and gentle modesty of their southern sisters. While the women of the north are more bustling, efficient, and vivacious, they are not, as a whole, so gentle and polished manner as the women of the south. The Pan-American Conference will do us all good in many ways. Social Mothers. It isn't only nor always physical mothers who know what mother love is. Those who live to serve humanity—whether mothers in the flesh or not—have the real mother instinct. You will find these wherever motherhood is needed, more slips of girls sometimes, going about administering comfort, brooding over a school-room, a day nursery, a juvenile court, or a bed of pain. Caught in the Act! The Cleveland Commercial is unique—and advanced—in that it is bidding for the patronage of women (and getting it, too) as few publications have yet had the foresight to do. They print woman-interest stuff in generous, near-fifty-fifty proportions. Furthermore, in a recent ad, they announced the startling discovery, "The (the women) would demand as high a standard as the newspaper as do the men." Ladies! We have been found out! Ought we to say "Thank you!" "Of course!" TWILIGHT The show of the tallest pines stretch longer, ever longer. And the winds that wait their whispers grow damper now and cold; And the mists rise in the valleys, always stronger, always stronger; And the dark tips of the tree tops show against the sunset's gold. With a rustle of the forest and a fading of the light, And the silent calls and numerous of the swiftly falling night. And the hum of unseen voices as the wild things take their flight, The evening comes. —Robert Strain, Jr.

The Woman's Column.

By Florence Riddick-Boya. MOTHER Unfailing source of comfort from the first, Faithful defender from the ills of life, My great desire, my beautiful ideal, My Mother. The one who understands, or missing that, Grants me the benefit of doubt, and knows My heart is right and all will yet be well My Mother. Proud magnifier of my deeds and worth, Believer in my boundless power to win, Through thick and thin, my best, my truest friend, My Mother. The anchor fast which makes me ever bold And feel secure on earth since she is here; —passing on,—the tie which draws me hence. My Mother. The memory which makes me sure of good, Strong argument that life is rich and fine, Conclusive proof that love will never wane. My Mother. PAN AMERICAN CONFERENCE Men and women develop and think along together through the ages. Women are the wives, sisters, daughters and sweethearts of the men and what one sex cogitates will crop out presently in the other. It is not surprising to see the Disarmament Conference in Washington, closely followed by the Pan-American Conference of Women in Baltimore, with "International Friendliness" the key-thought. This Conference is probably the biggest thing ever put across by women to date. It is a pleasant forecast of international understanding, in the western hemisphere at least, that all countries but one sent delegates. These were splendid women, leaders each in her own country, highly educated, publicly efficient, and each appointed after a career of social service. Sitting in six great Round Table meetings to discuss frankly the problems which concern all women or gather in immense mass-meetings to listen to masterly addresses, or passing in and out among the numerous luncheons, motor trips and play occasions, these women have learned great deal from one another and conceived a new appreciation of one another, a new willingness to co-operate, a new friendliness. Each will carry this back to her wide circle of influence. A permanent organization, "The Pan-American Association for the Advancement of Women," has grown out of this gathering. Guests from Europe were urging that it include Europe. Not alone may legislators determine whether there will be war or international friendliness, but the people must decide. Women are great propagandists and these women will cultivate the Pan-American friendliness from the cradles to the legislative halls. The olive branch, thus tended and watered, will flourish and our children and children's children may never know war. Incidentally, how many departments and ramifications of social betterment may this new association know! Already it has concerned itself with "the political and civil status of women," "child welfare," "education," "women in industry," and "the prevention of the traffic in women." Conferences of the Association will hereafter be annual, the next one probably in Canada. Member agencies of every kind: the Red Cross, the Christian Associations, organizations economic, medical, educational statesmanly, are calling international conferences and the world is actually being knit together into "international friendliness." "We are living, we are moving in a grand and awful time. To be living is sublime!"

SHIP IN DISTRESS FOUND AND LOST IN FOG OFF COAST

Schooner Ozmo Helpless on Reefs Near Port Orford; Eighteen Men and Captain Taken by Relief Vessels. WIRELESS MESSAGE TELLS OF CONDITION Hull Fills With Water and Drifts for 15 Hours; No Trace of Some Men Found. MARSHFIELD, Or., May 17.—A wireless message from the steamer Willamette tonight said that both that vessel and the tug Fearless had again lost the disabled motorship Ozmo when a heavy fog shut down suddenly, cutting her off from view. The Fearless was near the Willamette as the message was sent. The steamer Johanna Smith, which left here tonight, intended to stop off Port Orford and assist in the search. The motorship Ozmo, en route from San Francisco for Kuskowin river, Alaska, via Puget sound, was picked up by the tug Fearless at 2:30 p. m. today, her engine completely disabled and her hull nearly filled with water, after she had drifted helplessly for more than 12 hours. The damage was caused when the Ozmo struck the rocks near Port Orford, Or., in a heavy fog. Eighteen men, including the captain, were taken off the Ozmo by the Fearless and the steamer Willamette, which reached her simultaneously. She had drifted about 14 miles. A boat containing other members of the crew had left the Ozmo earlier in the day, and up tonight had not reported. It was expected the Ozmo would be towed here for repairs. The Ozmo's first wireless message said her engine had been disabled and drowned out by the accumulation of water in the hold.
