SUDDEN ATTACK FATAL TO WILLIAM STOEVER

William Andrew Stoever, who has resided in Oregon City for many years, died at the family home on Twelfth and Madison streets Friday evening. Although Mr. Stoever had been in poor health for the past year, his death came suddenly at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Stoever, a native of Germany, was 82 years of age. He came to the United States when 25 years of age, first settling in Chicago, Ill., where he married Miss Louise Miller in 1871. From that city he moved to Burlington, Iowa, and in 1875 started for Oregon, taking up a homestead in Clackamas county, near what is known as Carver. Meek's High Spirits Valued by Court at $100 Plus 30 Days

"The Biblical quotation about the meek and humble in spirit," is nothing in the life of Jim Meek. Jim is at present doing time in the county jail for the manufacture of spirits. This, in itself, would have been all right, but the spirits weren't meek. They had a kick.

Meek was arrested Wednesday night by deputies of the sheriff's office on his place at the mouth of the Molalla river, near the old Crown Willamette cottonwood cutting. Part of a still and some bottled concoctions were confiscated.

"Terrible stuff," was Sheriff Wilson's verdict as he smelled the work. "One hundred dollars and thirty days," was Judge E. J. Noble's verdict as he heard the case.

And so Meek is now in jail. When the sheriff's men raided Meek's place they discovered on a nearby farm, parts of a still, but no one was on the premises and no liquor was found.
