PORTLAND, June 3.—War between the Bing Kong-Leong and Hip Sing tong was renewed in Portland today when Toy Tung, 70, was shot and killed instantly, hardly an hour after the major portion of the Chinese residents of the city had returned from the funeral of Sue Kee Lang, wealthy Chinese merchant. All Chinatown was thrown into an uproar by the killing.

The body of Toy was riddled by six bullets, fired at close range from a .32 caliber automatic pistol. Delay in calling the police probably was responsible for the escape of the murderer, and the entire force was working on a meager description, furnished in badly broken English by Lee Ling, employer of Toy.

When the police arrived they found the body and some empty pistol cartridges, an automatic pistol and a .32 caliber weapon with which Toy Tung apparently tried to defend himself.

His pistol falling him, Toy evidently tried to shield himself with some large earthenware crocks by holding them in front of him. There were two crocks there. One had four bullet holes in the bottom and the other had three.
