Condition of Mark Said Detrimental To Teuton Finance

BERLIN, Sept. 19 .- The German people before the war, the thriftlest, next to the French, have become the most extravagant in the world. This assertion was made at the annual meeting of German savings bank officials, who are in conference here Professor Terhalle, a well known banking expert, analyzed the situation as follows:

"The saving instinct of German peo ple has been checked by the continuous drop in the value of the mark Where before the war every pfening was counted and the average citizen was satisfied if every week he could put 5 marks in a bank, he now gladly spends 1000 marks for a bottle of inferior champagne.

"Who knows whether our money will be worth anything at all tomer row" he asks himself. "If we do have 100,000 marks the tax collector comes around and takes away 70 per cent of it, and our neighbors call us profiteers in the bargain. So why not spend it all. Life is too short to wait for the Oregon mark to go up again."

A Question-On Monday evening there was considerable discussion in the council as to the manner of paying for the "improvement" of Center street, and other parts of the city on the bluff. It is a question with us whether Center street has been improved. As a property holder we should test the matter in a suit by law before paying any charges on account of what has been done. We think the labor expended has been valuable but not to the adjacent property by any means. It only serves to carry out the design of the original appropriation, to-wit: repairing roads leading into the city. As a permanent improvement to the street we do not regard it as at all satisfactory. fact, one half of the property is left isolated from the street on account of the improvement.
