GENERAL CRONJE DEAD.

Famous General of the Boer War Meets Defeat in Death.

KIERKSDORP, S. A., Feb. 4.-Piet Cronje, distinguished general of the Boer army in the South African war died here today. He was 75 years old and had lived in retirement since his surrender to the British at Paardeberg in 1900.

Cronje was one of the most picturesque fighters in the war that ended in England's assimilation of the Transpany, was in Oregon City on business vaal. He conducted a brillant and desperate campaign at the head of 10,000 men until driven to bay by the British in overwhelming numbers under Kitchener and Roberts.

Sunday evening will be "Mission in In a flerce engagement, with Cronje at Paardeberg, on February 16, 1900, At Zion's Lutheran church the Luther League topic Sunday evening at 7:45 is "Life of St. Paul," with John the British casualties amounted to 1100. A SPRING COSTUME.

Showing New Fad of Using Many Materials In One Frock.

PROCE OF BLUE AND WHITE POULARD.

The new fad for combining materials reaches the art of high expression in the frock sketched. The soutached motif in foulard, blue and white in this instance, is used for the deep skirt hem, while the upper part of the jupe is of plain blue messaline. These combined fabrics are blended in the waist portions together with a tucked white chiffon collar and jabot. A handsome decoration of Irish lace trims the reverse side of the waist. The skirt ruching is of navy blue chiffon cloth.

New Millinery.

This huge sombrero shape, designed by Georgette of Paris, is going to be a smart model in the spring and is typical of the hats to be worn when the tiny hugging caps are discarded. The model made of good colored silk, over which is shirred black chantilly lace flounce ing, the edge of the flouncing forming a frilled cap, which rests on the hair under the sweeping brim. Around the top of the crown is plaited a band of black velvet, and over this is draped a festoon of heavy gold cord.

The Cup That Cheers.

A business girl who wished to brew an occasional cup of tea in her own room hit upon this happy device: She went about among the secondhand furniture shops until she found an old machine table with the trendle removed. The top of the table she covered with asbestos, and on this she installed a small gas stove. The machine drawers were used for holding knives and forks, small ten, coffee and sugar canisters and paper napkins. Screw hooks fastened to the underside of the table hold ten and coffee pots, a saucepan and a frying pan, and curtains act as a screen. A compact and useful device is this, says the Woman's Home Companion.

night's play with William Clearwater in New York recently Alfred De Oro, holder of the world's pool title, made what experts declare the most wonderful shot ever seen in a championship contest. Clearwater had broken the bunch and left the "one" ball outstanding from the pyramid, De Oro studied the lay of the balls for fully three minutes before shooting his cue ball to the side and bottom rails for two banks and into the remainder of the pyramid, from which the "three" ball was sped away toward the lower left hand pocket and at right angles from the direction taken by the cue ball when it left the bottom rail. From this play be spread the balls all over the table and had little trouble in pocketing his needed five for the total of his required 200, but as the frame had to be played out he went on until he had pocketed thirteen for a total of 208.
