CITY OFFICIAL NEWSPAPER.

LOWER FARE PROPOSITION.

There was much interest manifested in the lower fare proposition as put up to the O. W. P. in this city Wednesday. The rate case was argued before the Oregon railway commissioners, both for and against, and a number of witnesses were examined as to what the rate is between here and Portland and on other lines in this section of the State.

The interest in the case shows that the people of this city want a lower rate to Portland if they can get it. Not that people wish to see the company carrying people at a loss, for few wish such a thing; but it is evident that the people won't believe that such is the case unless the company can show convincing evidence to that effect.

FIREMEN FULLY APPRECIATED.

The large attendance at the firemen's ball Wednesday evening is a token that the people do not always forget. It is another evidence that the people of Oregon City recognize that the volunteer fire department is a good thing, and worthy of support, and that there are many people here who are not inclined to be slow in showing their appreciation.

Women Should Pay More Attention to Present Day Athletics.

Especially if Living in the City.

By VIRGINIA C. GILDERSLEEVE, Dean of Barnard College.

IC VIEWPOINT THAN HER BROTHER.

It is rare to find a college man who excels both in the classroom and on the athletic field. I believe most men's colleges have a rule similar to the one just made at Vassar that a man must attain at least PASSING RANK to be eligible for the college teams.

A sport should not be turned into a trade—a money making trade. The GAME SHOULD BE PLAYED FOR THE GAME AND NOT FOR THE GAIN.

MANY WOMEN OUTSIDE OF COLLEGES, ESPECIALLY IN CITIES, WOULD BE MUCH BETTER OFF IF THEY PAID MORE ATTENTION TO ATHLETICS.

FOR WOMEN, MEN HAVE PLENTY—AT THEIR CLUBS AT THE ARMORIES, AT THE Y. M. C. A.

ganization that has been spending years in perfecting itself for the fray until today the city has a fire fighting brigade that is well worthy the support and approval of the best citizens; and it should at all times be made to feel that the citizenship is back of the organization and the individual, ready to pay all debts of gratitude in coin of full value.

The Road to Literary Success A Story For Those Who Are Ambitious to Write

By JAMES B. HANSON Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Perhaps if a census of persons who are scribbling were taken it would be found that half the educated people of the United States are trying to write for the other half.

There are persons, especially literary persons, who claim that the highest grade of fiction is that in which there are no incidents. The characters are expected to talk their way into the interest of the readers.

could be a reader for him, correcting his manuscripts, making suggestions here and there and giving him hints in the practical or business part of his profession.

So one day when they were sitting among the palms and the flowers and the other reminders of spring he told her that he would be glad to lift the burden from her delicate shoulders to his own stronger ones.

Miss Easton in accepting his offer fell into a practical vein herself—indeed, a more practical vein than that of her lover. She told him that in order to succeed an author must make a market for his wares.

In this way Mr. Ostrander, a highly educated man, learned from Miss Easton, who had but common school training, that in all things sold for money there are certain fixed business rules that—though brilliant exceptions may occur—are practically inexorable.

Soon after their return to the north they were married. Mrs. Ostrander then told her husband that the publishing house she had been with was getting out a simple little story of hers in book form.

And the result? The man who had taken up literature as a profession became the publisher of the former drugge and fortune was achieved for both.

FARE REDUCTION AHEAD OF O. W. P.

seems to be that there is to be a reduction; that the members of the board are certain to make some reduction.

It is claimed that some months ago the matter was taken up with the company and there was prospect of a smart reduction in fare when a body of Oregon City merchants went to the company officials and threatened to take all freight business away from the road if it reduced its fare.

With a smart fare reduction, the railway double-tracked to Portland and an express train service with stops at Milwaukie and Gladstone only it is believed the city would be in much better shape for business than now.

Several days may intervene between the hearing and the decision, and Oregon City people will await with interest the outcome of the contention tried out Wednesday morning.

Points for Mothers

If it's a shame to give a dog a bad name, how much more deplorable is it to thus brand a little child, says a recent correspondent.

Perhaps the first thing that any man or woman has to learn in undertaking any business of life is the lesson of confidence in his own worth. If a man believes himself a failure, success would be a miracle or an accident.

And it's pretty much the same way with behavior. Unconsciously we modify our behavior after the type of person that we imagine ourselves to be.

Perhaps one reason why this is so is the almost general failure of grown people to realize how early in life impressions are made.

And yet how often his parents take him out and apologize for his behavior or imply by their conversation that he is a "terror."

This is only a sample of the sort of thing that grown people repeatedly say in the presence of children. And it's a very great pity. Give the child at least a fair chance and don't brand him at the start with a bad name.
