GOOD CONGRESSMEN POSSIBLE.

Congress is through with its regular session and will rest until time to take on the special session, called by the President. Quite a number of Republicans will continue to rest, the call of the President not interesting them.

Had Congress done as it should have done—attended to business strictly and not spent part of its time in trying to keep from doing what the majority wanted done, and that for which they were elected by the people, there would be no need of an extra session at this time.

And it may not be wise to overlook the fact that it was this attitude in the lawmakers sent to the past few Congresses—that of dodging everything the people wanted and buckling down to business every time the interests called, that led to so many Republican Congressmen being left at home by the late election.

At that there are but few Republicans who can see what did really hit them; and many even of those who were hit are trying to prove to their friends and constituents that it is the natural restfulness of the people that caused them to lose out—that it was time for a change, and that the people cannot be satisfied long at a time with anything but must have a change of some kind about so often despite who is in the saddle, or the way in which he rides.

But this is not a true analysis of the conditions prevailing now, and not true of conditions that have ever prevailed. Whenever the people as a class have been restive, the history of the world over, there has always been a reason; and a few in the generation affected have always been able to see it, and the great majority of the generations that have followed have seen it. A few in this generation see, and certain of these men have given warning; the two or three generations following will see even more closely. Those who cannot see what is in the air now should study the conditions of former generations and learn of them; seeing the things that were wrong in those generations and understanding them through the additional data that we now have should impress itself on the minds of those who do not see the needs of this generation with the fact that there are needs and that a few years later they will show up distinctly. And knowing this to be a fact from the study of the history that is to repeat itself they should become wise and stop and look, for certain it is if one will look in sincerity he will be able to see much that is covered from those who do not look.

Not all can see the glaring evils that are in the best of systems honestly administered—but they are there—what then can one expect of a bad system however administered, or of a good system badly administered? And is it not because of these conditions that we seek to elect our wiser men to make and administer laws for us? And are these conditions not sufficient reason why we should pick and try, and when one man fails to come up to what he is elected to do for us that we should choose some one else to act for us in his place?

With a Congress of several hundred of men it ought to be an easy matter to determine who are faithful servants of the people. These men should be chosen to succeed themselves. But wherever there is a man who neglects to serve his constituents, and serves the interests—or is a man of whom there is any doubt—he should be left at home and another choice made. This will only happen a time or two until men will see that a Congressman must be a true servant of the people if he would continue to serve, and it will then become the fashion to serve.

As it is now the man who receives the most for serving the interests has just as good a chance with the people for a re-election—and ofttime better—than the man who serves his constituents. A premium is put upon "doing" the people—rather than "doing for" the people—the people can have faithful servants if they will retire to private life quickly any man who dodges duty, whether he lines up with the interests or not.

We have no fault to find with the recall, and in extreme cases it may be made to serve with great good; but if the people will follow their best judgment in selecting their law makers, and not stick so close to party regardless of fitness, there will be little necessity of invoking the recall, with its attendant expense.

REMEMBER HER BIRTHDAY.

Old Schoolmates Give Mrs. Henry Cooke a Surprise Saturday. Mrs. Henry Cooke was taken completely by surprise at her home on Seventh street on Saturday afternoon, the occasion being her birthday, and the guests giving her the pleasant surprise being her old schoolmates.

The hostess has resided in this city for many years, being a daughter of two of the oldest and highly respected pioneers, Mr. and Mrs. Winston, now deceased. Those who assisted Mrs. Cooke to make her birthday anniversary an occasion to be long remembered were Mrs. C. C. Babcock, Mrs.

Pennsylvania Girl Named by Her Father as Deputy Sheriff

How would you like to be made a prisoner by this young woman? Would you resist if she put her hand on your shoulder and said, "You are under arrest"? The chances are that you would quietly submit and would hold out your hands to be handcuffed if your captor thought such a precaution necessary. The young woman is Miss Lucy Johns, and she is a duly accredited deputy sheriff of Fayette county, Pa. Her father is the sheriff of the county, and he has appointed his daughter as one of his assistants with full power to make arrests and to act for him in any official capacity.

Henry Meldrum, Mrs. E. G. Caufield, Mrs. G. W. Church, Mrs. Charles Burns, Sr.

Banquet to the Little Folks. The kindergarten class in the Presbyterian Sunday school, with Mrs. Charles Ely teacher, will enjoy a banquet to the little ones on Thursday afternoon from 3 to 5, at which time Mrs. Ely will be assisted by the mothers of the little folks to do the honors of the occasion.

OVERCOAT LOST. Gray overcoat, at the fire; finder please leave at this office. Read the Morning Enterprise.

TWO UNHAPPY COUPLES ASK FOR SEPARATION

WALTER S. McGUIRE CHARGED WITH FOLLIES—EMILY SEIGLAFF NOT MARRIED.

Mrs. Sylvia McGuire, of Portland, Monday filed a suit for a decree of divorce against Walter S. McGuire, to whom she was married January 7, 1903, at Louisville, Ky. She charges that McGuire has a nagging disposition and an unbecoming character, and that on March 1, 1907, he threatened to leave her unless she consented to take his sister and brother-in-law into their home. In November of the same year he is said to have told her that he did not love her and that he looked upon their relations simply as a business arrangement.

Emily Seiglaiff charges that she was illegally married to Arthur W. Seiglaiff on December 2, 1909, at Coeur d'Alene, Ida. Two weeks later at Seattle he informed her that he had a wife, Anna, by name, living at Milwaukee, Wis., and then he left her. Mrs. Seiglaiff asks for permission to resume her maiden name of Emily Schneek. Wheelock & Williams, of Portland, are her attorneys.

PRESBYTERIAN BANQUET

Will Be Held Next Week With Good Program.

Tuesday evening, March 14, is the date of the next meeting of the Presbyterian Brotherhood. It will be held in the parlors of the Presbyterian church and in connection with the literary program there will be a feast by the ladies of the church.

The main question to be up for discussion will be that of taxation—taxation methods ancient, modern and future, the methods of the Hebrew being used to typify that of the ancients and Single Tax that of the future.

W. S. U'Ren, Grant B. Dimick and Rev. Lansborough are among those who are on the program, and there will be a half dozen entertaining musical numbers.

What's the use to bake when you can get Royal Bread for 5c a loaf at Harris' Grocery.

BROTHERHOOD

Will Give One of Its Popular Banquets this Evening.

The Brotherhood banquet of the Congregational church will be held in the church parlors this evening. Preparations have been made for a very enjoyable time. The ladies will serve the banquet, as usual, and the De Laros orchestra will provide the music.

Better to Be Born Poor Than Rich

By ANDREW CARNEGIE.

MOST millionaires' wives are not happy. They have too many luxuries and have no mental resources to fall back upon. Some of my partners have been unjustly criticised for what was not their fault, but the fault of their wives.

DON'T REFUSE A MAN BECAUSE HE IS A MILLIONAIRE. I WOULD RATHER BE BORN POOR THAN A MILLIONAIRE, AND I HAVE HAD EXPERIENCE IN BOTH DIRECTIONS.

I have made forty-two or forty-three millionaires in my time, but I want to say that the only right a man has to wealth lies in his ACQUIRING IT BY SOME USEFUL LABOR. The great trouble with the wealth of today is that the sons of millionaires do not realize this very necessity of being useful to the community. Work that one is not glad to do never amounts to much. SMILE ALL THE TIME.

I like to think of the story told me by Mr. Schwab. It was while they were having a little trouble down at Homestead, and the boys had ducked one old German in the river because he wouldn't leave the pumps.

Mr. Schwab met Hans coming up the road all wet and bedraggled and looking the picture of distress.

"Why, what's the matter, Hans?" asked Mr. Schwab. "Oh, I got thrown into the river!" was the cheerful reply. "And what did you do?" "I JUST LAUGHED." So when you are in danger of losing your temper just think of that old Dutchman and smile.
