A member of the board of directors of an insane asy Mr. A. A. Baker, a refrigerating endineer of Portland, was in the city on lum, a lady, persuaded me to give her business Tuesday, conferring with R. pet project $100,000.

I drove one afternoon to the asylum with a check for the amount I was to give. The lady I have mentioned went with me and had arranged for her attorney to be there with the necessary legal papers. When we arrived we found a telegram from the attorney saying that he would be delayed Learning that the patients were to have a dance the same evening, we decided to remain and have a look at the dancers. No patients were received in the institution except those who were considered homeless. Indeed, most of them were unbalanced on but one subject. We were given tea in the apartments of the medical director, and his wife made us at home till the ball opened.

which was very early in the evening.

for it must end at 10 o'clock. I and my gift were known, and noth ing would do but that I should take part in the festivities. I danced several times, when a young man of very prepossessing appearance came up to me and asked if I would be his partner. There are occasions when a girl will meet a man to whom she is especially drawn. I had not been in com pany with this young fellow long before I felt a pang that he should be insane. He charmed me at once.

Naturally I wished to discover his weak point. I tried him on several subjects, but saw nothing abnormal until I struck aviation. Then he began to talk wild. He said that he had some views about flying machines he hoped to work out which would bring eroplanes pearer to the construction order houses should a parcels post be of birds. I declined. His personality had thrown a spell over me which I thought if yielded to would grow upon me. In other words, I felt that I had met my fate in one of unsound mind and it would be dangerous to my comfort to yield to what might soon become a erious infatuation. He gave me a half reproachful glance suggesting to me that he had been imessed by me as I had been impressed by him and left me.

When the evening's ammement was ended my friend the directress told me that we would proceed to the superin tendent's room, where the attorney was waiting for us to transact our business, and then go home. I went with her, and, on opening the door of the office, there, sitting at a table looking over some papers, was the young man who had gone daft on aviation. I stopped short, paralyzed with astonishment. He arose and gave me one of those pleasant smiles that had beford to charm me.

"Why," I said, "I-I didn't expect to find you here." It was his turn to look surprised.

It was not long before he expressed through my friend the directress a desire to continue our acquaintance, and I sent him an invitation to call on me. At his first visit I drew him on to aviation, and I learned that he made it his hobby, having an inventive taste, but had never been up in an aeroplane
