For the Children

A Baby Llama and His Knees Braces.

The Admiral and the Sentry.

When Admiral de Horsey, who some years ago had command of the British fleet in the Pacific, was admiral of the north Atlantic squadron he was one evening dining on shore at Port Royal, Jamaica.

A Pearl Diver's Peril.

We all love pearls, yet few of us realize the perils of diving for pearls. The successful diver must be courageous, active and have great presence of mind.

Little Things.

Little things are sometimes important. Here is an instance: There was a cold weather and then a little warmer weather and then cold again in York, Pa.

The Game of Menagerie.

All the players take the names of animals. If played indoors they sit in chairs. If outside on benches, a leader then tells a story about animals, bringing in some of the names chosen.

To Suspend a Needle in the Air.

Place a magnet on a stand to raise a little above the table, then bring a small sewing needle, containing a thread, within a little of the magnet, keeping hold of the thread to prevent the needle from attaching itself to the magnet.

DRILL IN OILY SAND AT THE STONE WELL

CAVE-IN CLEANED OUT AND WATER AGAIN SHUT OFF WITH CASING.

STONE, Or., March 25.—(Spl.)—The oil well here is down close to the 1100 feet mark and still "going down." Progress has not been so rapid this week as last, not from lack of capacity on the part of the drillers but from the fact that there have been cave-ins and water to bother and things unforeseen.

CORRESPONDENCE

LOGAN. These fine spring days make the farmer smile. We haven't seen any snakes out yet, but a tramp, one feminine peddler and two medicine vendors have toured this country.

Dusty roads in March and real dust at that; put it down in your diary. Henry Huber served refreshments to the boys Sunday. Now that Henry has broken the "spell" it's up to some more of Logan's "chickens" to follow suit.

Miss Winnie Brown, near Stone, is quite ill with appendicitis. Dr. Mount is in attendance.

On Monday, March 20, the Clear Creek Creamery Co. held its tenth annual stockholders' meeting. The officers elected for ensuing year are: W. P. Kirchem, H. S. Anderson, F. W. Ricksch, Both Young and L. D. Mumpford, board of directors.

"I had filed my bag with oysters and was about to ascend when, looking up, I saw a big man eating shark watching me. I knew that to rise to the surface would be fatal, so I moved quickly to the opposite rock, stirred up a great cloud of mud, rose in the darkness and reached the side of the boat just in time to escape the jaws of the big fish. Had I hesitated an instant in doing what I did I would have paid the penalty with my life."

Little things are sometimes important. Here is an instance: There was a cold weather and then a little warmer weather and then cold again in York, Pa. An icicle formed on the water-spout of a certain house. The weather turned warm again. The icicle fell in the night and made a loud noise that awakened one of the sleepers. The awakened person found that the house was full of coal gas that was escaping through a hole in the stovepipe and that might have killed the whole family if one of them had not been aroused by the fall of the icicle.

All the players take the names of animals. If played indoors they sit in chairs. If outside on benches, a leader then tells a story about animals, bringing in some of the names chosen. When a name is mentioned the owner gets up, gives the sound of the animal and sits down, but if the word "menagerie" or "animals" is used all must get up and give the sounds of the animals they represent. A new leader is chosen after awhile and the old leader, who is blindfolded and then feels about until he touches some one.

Place a magnet on a stand to raise a little above the table, then bring a small sewing needle, containing a thread, within a little of the magnet, keeping hold of the thread to prevent the needle from attaching itself to the magnet. The needle in endeavoring to fly to the magnet and being prevented by the thread will remain curiously suspended in the air.

The road that ends against the sky I love the very best. It starts near by the open square. Exactly like the rest. But then it winds and winds uphill as far as it can go. And stops just where the sky begins. And where the poplars grow. I wish that I might live up there. So close against the sky. To touch the little stars at night. And watch the moon go by.
