Cheese Parties Popular.

One of the favorite amuse among young people just now is what they term "cheese parties." A young lady desirous of entertaining her friends very informally invites about a dozen of her "intimates" to spend the evening with her and partake of a Weish rabbit. One of the peculiar charms of this entertainment is "the come and go early" plan, so every one is on hand by 8 or shortly after.

The hostess must have one pound of fresh, dry cheese (any grocer will give the proper kind), cut into small pieces and placed in the chafing dish. Salt, mustard, cayenne, butter and a bottle of ale or a pitcher of sweet milk must be on the table near by. Mix a cup of milk or about the same quantity of ale or beer with the cheese, light the little lamp and allow the mixture to become partially warmed and soft be fore calling the guests into the dining

Then add, when the cheese is some what melted, four teaspoonfuls of butter, four small tenspoonfuls of mustard, two teaspoonfuls of sait and a little pepper. Thin it well and cook until it thickens, being careful not to let it curdle. Some experts conside an egg necessary, but many do no think it an improvement. Half a slice of bread or toast should be ready on a plate for each person. When the "rabbit" is cooked, serve a tablespoonful on each piece.

The beverage for the evening is usually good strong coffee. The small, square sea foam crackers, buttered, saited and just beated through, are delicious always and especially at a 'cheese party."

The young people do not despise bowls of popped corn or dishes of candy as a means of occupation until the rabbit is ready for eating. Nothing jollier is to be imagined than a group of lively boys and girls sented around a table, their eyes all fixed on the center of attraction, each with his or her word of advice in regard to the manner of stirring, length of time required for cooking, etc., until, as the commander in chief inspires confidence. they turn their attention to cracking jokes and telling stories while waiting for the result of so much twisting and turning of the sliver spoon and fork in the fast melting cheese.

By 10 or a little later the happy crowd has dispersed, one and all declaring that the evening has been a success, and the hostess may bid them good night with a smilling face, feeling sure that each one has had "a real good

Corn Dodgers.

These cakes, made from the earliest times by the Indians and negroes and baked on leaves or on a boe in the hot ashes, may be successfully imitated by modern cook in her up to date

Take one plnt of the genuine southern cornment and aift it with one cupful of flour and a teaspoonful of salt. Scald this with two cupfuls of boiling water or milk in which a rounded tablespoonful of shortening has been melted. This should result in a moist batter, but one sufficiently firm to hold in place when dropped from a spoon into a well greased baking pan. Two tablespoonfuls of the batter will be enough for each dodger, about three-fourths of an inch in thickness. The cakes may be even smaller if preferred. To give them the old fashioned southern finish leave the full length imprint of the finger across the top of each cake. Bake in a moderately hot oven half an hour and eat hot with butter for breakfast or luncheon. If preferred the dodgers may be baked on a well greased griddle. Cook slowly and when well browned on one side turn to the

For the Tea Table. A novelty to serve instead of candy at afternoon tea is made from figs stuffed with chopped nuts and a fresh marshmallow. The figs are first soaked in brandy, or sherry if pre-ferred, for half a day, then pulled apart and each balf lined with the out and pulled around the marshmal-low to make a round ball. The only drawback to this delicious confection is that it is somewhat "smeary" to
