BIG BOOSTER DAY BRINGS IN CROWD

THOUSANDS COME TO OREGON CITY, COME EARLY AND STAY ALL DAY.

STREETS FILLED JOSTLING HUNDREDS

Big Street Parade, Good Display of Handsome Horses—Jolly, Tired Throng Goes Home Happy.

Speaking of crowds, Oregon City had a big one Booster Day. From early morning until noon the stream of teams poured into town without any lessening in frequency.

On Main street just after the parade had passed the Enterprise office there were not less than 4500 people on the four blocks between Fourth and Eighth streets alone.

The crowd poured in from early morning to nearly noon at which time there was a lull; but it began to come again shortly after the noon hour and continued to flock in until the middle of the afternoon.

Principal among the events of the day was the horse show and Booster Day parade.

SKILL AND NERVE SAVE FROM DEATH

WHAT PROMISED A CATASTROPHE TURNED ASIDE INTO MERE ACCIDENT.

WILSON, THE AERONAUT, ESCAPES

Balloon Completely Destroyed and Parachute Goes Up in Flames—Power Plant Badly Damaged.

What promised to end in a harrowing catastrophe was turned aside into a mere accident by the skill with which J. W. Wilson, of the Miller Carnival Company, manipulated his balloon in a rapid accidental descent to earth about 10 o'clock Saturday morning.

Wilson was making his ascent had risen to a point about 500 feet above the earth the bag comprising the sustaining power of the balloon exploded, letting him fall suddenly to the ground.

As soon as the explosion told Wilson of his danger he cut loose his parachute and prepared to alight as easily as possible. No sooner had he cut loose than he began to drop suddenly but shortly after the parachute opened, his descent became more gradual.

At that he saw he was in imminent danger of dropping on the high power wires of the P. R. L. & P. Co. at the west end of the Suspension bridge, and was compelled to swing himself over to avoid a shock that would burn him to a crisp.

With almost superhuman effort he swung himself over, and a moment later alighted on the roof of a car standing on the tracks near the West Side depot, where his parachute struck the wires and was almost instantly consumed.

Thousands of people who were in the city to attend Booster Day, many of whom had been attracted to the city by this same advertised ascension, witnessed the accident and for a moment stood with bated breath as they witnessed the danger in which the aeronaut was placed for the instant. And not one for a moment expected him to alight in safety, while men and women turned their faces away not wishing to see him fall to instant death.

Wilson was the advertised balloon attraction of the Booster Day show. A large part of the Booster Day crowd came to the city to see the balloon ascension, which was a part of the free exhibit used to draw a crowd. No program in charge, as well as to the thousands who had feared for the safety of the aeronaut once the accident had occurred. But the happy ending obviated any marbling of the program of the day, while the death of Wilson would have cast a cloud over the enjoyment of the occasion.

Speaking of the accident Wilson said: "I started under unfavorable conditions; the wind was blowing so hard I could not manipulate the balloon properly. When I was about 300 feet in the air, and getting settled, the bag ripped. I was too busy trying to get loose to realize my danger. The parachute was still attached to the balloon and the whole business was falling before I could cut myself loose. I finally managed to cut loose from the bag and swung the parachute, with the purpose of steering toward the depot sheds, rather than fall on the rocks. I missed the sheds and the two high power electric wires, each carrying 15,000 volts, and landed on a passenger car at the station. The parachute was caught in the wires and was burned. Luckily I escaped without any bruises. I knew before I started that I was going from one danger into another, for the wind was blowing strong before the Falls. I had no business."

BEEBE DISCHARGED BY GRAND JURY

CLAIM SET UP THAT HE KILLED HIS BROTHER, HIRAM BEEBE. IN EFFORT TO SAVE HIS OWN LIFE.

Nelson Fought With a Club, Hiram With an Axe—Grass Shows Evidence of Bitter Contest.

Nelson Beebe, who killed his brother Hiram, last January at Clackamas Heights, was discharged from custody Saturday afternoon, after the grand jury returned not a true bill, following an investigation of his case. Beebe is 80 years of age.

There were no witnesses to the fight to the death of the two brothers. Nelson had been to town and when he returned in an intoxicated condition he said his brother met him at the door with an axe and the battle commenced. Nelson grasped a huge club and in the end he killed his brother, after being seriously wounded himself.

The first intimation that the neighbors had of the fight was the appearance of the slayer at the home of George Mackinnis, with a serious cut in his head, a deep gash running along the right side of his face, from which there was pouring a stream of blood. Hiram Beebe was found dead at the door to the side of the home. The grass was trodden down and in many places were to be seen blood spots, showing that the fight had been long and bitter. Hiram lay a few feet from the house, with his nose broken and his face bruised in many places. Near at hand was a large club that Nelson had used, and a few feet away was the ax that Hiram had fought with, the weapon with which he had inflicted a deep cut on the head of Nelson.

Hiram Beebe was 77 years of age, and crossed the Plains in 1862, coming from Iowa. Nelson Beebe was a veteran of the Civil War and crossed the Plains at a later day. The brothers had been keeping bachelor quarters for several years and had lived in the Mary Roberts cottage on Clackamas Heights for about two months prior to the tragedy. None suspected any serious trouble to arise between them. Both men were widowers, Hiram having been married twice. His second wife was Mrs. Cathrow, of Canemah. Hiram had no children, but Nelson has a daughter, Laura, of Red Bluff, Cal. George Beebe, a younger brother, lives in Eastern Oregon, and a nephew lives near Estacada.

The grand jury made a careful investigation of the case, but Nelson Beebe stoutly affirmed that he killed his brother in self defense, and that he served his own life. There was no evidence, except that of the accused, and Beebe was accordingly given his freedom.

OUR FARMER FRIENDS KEPT THEIR MONEY

CARNIVAL PEOPLE FAILED TO PULL THE COIN OUT OF MANY VISITORS' POCKETS.

Booster Day didn't appeal to the "wise old owl" of farmers who came to Oregon City for a good time Saturday. If one listened intently he could hear the money jingle as the farmers and farmer boys walked up and down the streets, but little of it was heard to jingle in the money boxes of the Carnival people.

Carnival people are always losing money, no matter how much they are making—it seems to be a part of the business to always have fond recollections of the good business they did "over in the last county," but at that it is generally believed that the poor month stories told here were genuine. Booster Day brought a crowd to the city, and many of those who came spent an enjoyable day at that, but few who came loosened up for the attractions to any great extent.

GRAND ELKS' BALL ON FRIDAY NIGHT

BUSCH HALL PRESENTS A PRETTY SIGHT WITH ITS JOLLY CROWD OF DANCERS.

COMMITTEE GREATLY COMPLIMENTED

Everything Passes Off Pleasantly and Those Who Participate Have a Most Enjoyable Evening of Pleasure.

Never before was Busch's beautiful hall more attractive than on Friday night, the occasion being the second annual ball given by the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, Oregon City Lodge No. 1189. Over 200 people danced until 12 o'clock to the latest music furnished by Parsons' orchestra of seven pieces. The gowns worn by the ladies, and the artistic decorations of the hall presented a most attractive sight.

American flags formed in groups were used among the decorations of the halls, and festoons of purple and white, the colors of the hall and caught in the center by clusters of electric lights of corresponding shades. The balcony, where the orchestra was stationed was very artistically decorated. In the center overlooking the hall was a large Elk's head, the horns of which were adorned with purple and white lights, and the railing of the balcony was festooned with purple and white. A profusion of Oregon grape completed the artistic designs.

During the evening ice cream and cake were served in the banquet hall, the tables being decorated to correspond with those of the hall, and the punch bowl, which was found on the main floor received its share of patronage of the merry dancers.

The committee, which deserves the credit for the success of the affair, is composed of the following: General committee, Henry O'Malley, John Adams and William B. Howell; floor committee, Dr. Clyde Mount, Harry Draper, Thomas P. Randall, John F. Clark, Harry S. Moody, William R. Logus, William Mulvey, A. A. Price; reception, Dr. M. C. Strickland, William Sheehan, B. T. McEain, Frank Busch, Linn E. Jones, John Risley, W. H. Howell, J. E. Hedges, E. C. Baker, Theodore Osmond; ticket seller, E. T. Fields; ticket collector, C. W. Evans.

DYNAMITE OIL WELL AT CREVICE IN ROCKS

MORE AND MORE SIGNS SHOW UP SIMILAR TO CALIFORNIA OIL FIELD.

STONE, Or., April 22.—(Special.)—There was a successful shooting of the oil well here Friday, late, and in consequence there are many hopeful signs in and around the well. A charge of high-pressure explosives were lowered into the crevice in the rock in which the drill had been working for a couple of days, and exploded. There was a large amount of debris loosened up. Since that time the drillers have been busy cleaning this out of the well in preparation to a further descent.

The drillers think much good was done by the dynamite. More and varied signs of oil were since shown and the drillers declare that the indications are more and more similar to the conditions in the California oil field. The men at work in this well are familiar with the successful work in the California field.
