THE RECALL IN CLACKAMAS. The activity of several gentlemen of Clackamas County in striving to recall two county officials is not to be commended. The stench raised by the recall in Estacada is fresh in the nostrils of many, and they are still at it in Tacoma.

Clackamas County needs system in its road construction. The personality of the men who are looking to that end is beside the question. The expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars annually is no trifle, to be used carelessly, without regard to method.

The controversy between F. J. S. Tooze, superintendent of the Oregon City schools, and H. M. James, principal of the Estacada school, and head of the debating team of the Clackamas School League, has aroused no little interest among lovers of fair play.

The council has passed the new gas franchise ordinance by a unanimous vote, and negotiations will now be opened, so The Enterprise is reliably informed, to furnish gas for all purposes to the people of Oregon City at a reasonable rate. Away with the hot cook stove in the summer.

Oregon City has a new Home Rule ordinance that will soon be in force. The occasional drinker will be careful to take his drop elsewhere than in a saloon where his best girl can watch him from the sidewalk.

BRICKER SENT TO JAIL. Oswego Man Faces Year's Sentence for Non-Support.

Charles Bricker, of Oswego, who was arrested March 4 last, for failure to support his family, and who was later released upon a promise to contribute $20 a month toward their support, was rearrested Saturday, having failed to assist his family since his release two months ago.

Heart to Heart Talks. By EDWIN C. NYE.

"WANTED—A BIG BROTHER." That was one of the big signs at the child welfare exhibit held recently in New York.

You who live in the wide open space of the countryside or you whose lawns or yards give room for children's joyful play, what do you know of child life in the tenement districts of the big cities?

In those regions live children whose only play is in the foul dark rooms frequently infested with disease or in the streets. In a single block in New York City five—or exist—2,371 children!

The population of a fair sized county seat town of the middle west—children alone, to say nothing of adults—is congested in a district no bigger than the courthouse square, and there is no playground but the street.

And listen! With no other playground, of 717 children arrested in New York in July, 1900, half were arrested for playing games. The world has wept at the sorrows of "Poor Joe," compelled by the burly policeman to "move on," and here in the guise of big patrolmen arresting little children for playing games on the only playground they can have.

Another exhibit showed a sad phase of child life—children forced at a tender age to work in factories and sweat shops. Some of the mere tots work on willow plumes, knotting forty-two separate filaments for a cent, or at the age of four and five years they make artificial violets—144 for 2 cents—or they work twelve hours picking beans of coffee from the sweepings.

And they die like flies. Much is being said about the conservation of our natural resources, but how will you compare the material wealth of soil and forest and steeps and mine with "a better crop of boys and girls?" Is a tree worth more than a child? The only hopeful feature of this New York exhibit which finds its parallel in all large cities is that one-half the world learns how the other half lives. And to know the awful needs of these neglected children is to find a way for betterment.

"The Big Brother" society—you and I—must be responsible. We are our brother's keeper.

Scion of the House of Gould Weds Daughter of a Princess

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

JAY GOULD, second son of George J. Gould and grandson of the founder of the Gould fortune, took the daughter of a princess as his bride, having thus excelled his sister Vivien, who recently married Lord Inceles, an English nobleman.

Overfeeding must be avoided, as must also underfeeding. Either extreme will stunt the growth of the young stock. Can't expect to succeed with broody hens, incubators and little chicks, these days, unless we stay close at home to meet all emergencies.
