Moses Bliss was an old fashion man. Most folks called him an old "codger."

All at once, when Moses had passes his sixty second birthday, and was tell-ing bimself that he felt as good as the day he was thirty, and had every prospect of living to be a hundred years old, a doctor told him that his left lung was going, and that he must make tracks for a higher altitude at once. Moses was mad as well as scared. He called the doctor all kinds of fools, vowed he wouldn't move a rod, and then set out for Bencon Hill, a hundred miles away. The higher you can get above the sea the better for your left lung and the more expensive the board. Beacou Hill was only a village, and had only one tavern, and that tavern charged Moses $5 a week for board. Of course he kicked. He called the landlord all sorts of names and said he would start for home next day, but he didn't start. It was on one of his walks that he met the widow Archer. She had a hammer and nails and was mailing a board on the fence in front of her poor little home. He took the hammer away from her and made the board secure, and then walked off with only a grant. He had noticed, however, that she was a woman of thirty-five and fairly goodlooking, and he was pleased with her. A call was made next day. He said he had come on business. He was no sooner seated than he asked:

"Look-a-here, widow, why haven't you married again?"

"Sir, you are taking a great liberty!" she replied. "Come, now, I am here as a friend." Jeweled trimming is used on a great many evening dresses. Distinctly this is as much a lace sea

I've no doubt you can cook and manage a house as well as the best of them. I can see only two reasons why you are a widow after four years. Did you vow never to marry again?"

"I-I can't say I did, though I had one of the best of husbands. I don't think we ought to talk about it." "Then if you didn't yow it's because you are a widow of small means, and these avaricious villains around here ward. Selected Words.

The game of selected words is played thus: The company may be divided into sides, each half selecting a word. the object of one side being to find out the word selected by the other. The word must be the name of something well known to both sides. Words of two or more meanings are the best to be selected, such as pen, post, mail, rail, deer, etc. The answers are thus more varied and the words more difficult to select. Each side asks questions of the other, which should be answered in a plain, matter of fact, truthful way. The side guessing the hidden word in the fewest questions is victorious.

The county paper came out with a bint that a certain worthy widow had been left a legacy, and the editor was glad of it. It was known all over the village that in buying a new hat for $5 EXCURSION she had offered a ten dollar bill to be changed. The widow wanted to deny the reports, but she remembered the caution she had received. FARES EAST

It wasn't two weeks before a wid-ower called. He didn't say a word about the rumors. Indeed, he fought shy of the money question. He just said that he had been a lonesome widower for five long years and was getting tired of it.
