WILL YOU BE THERE FRIDAY?

The directors of the Clackamas Southern Railway Co. have extended an invitation to the people of Oregon City and Clackamas County to attend a mass meeting at the rooms of the Oregon City Commercial Club on Friday evening of this week. This meeting is called so that people interested—and we all should be—may hear the report of the directors on the progress of the work. The directors are working without salary, they are devoting no little time for the good of the cause, and they properly feel that they should have the assistance of every public spirited man in the county.

Nearly a mile of the Clackamas Southern leading out of Oregon City has been graded, and a force of men is kept busy.

The directors propose to construct the first division to Beaver Creek as speedily as possible.

They are earnestly striving to do what has not been done heretofore, and they have set out to accomplish the construction of a railway line connecting Oregon City with the interior of the county along the Molalla road.

What are you doing to help? Are you standing pat? Or are you boosting?

Why not attend the meeting Friday night and at least show your good will?

Harmony between the residents of Oregon City and the people from the country districts is a thing to be desired. We must have it. The interests of the city and country are mutual. Some of us in town have been slow, perhaps, to realize it, but we are coming along the right of line.

We like to have people from the country come into our own office when they come to town. We like to rub up against them" and say "Howdy." We believe this is the right spirit. The meeting is Friday evening at 8 o'clock in the Commercial club-rooms.

Will you be there?

WE ALL HAVE OUR TROUBLES.

Oregon City forces the saloon man to pay an annual license of $1000. Oregon City says the saloon man shall not sell liquor to minors, to drunks, and to others. Oregon City tells the saloon man the interior of his resort must be operated in full view from the sidewalk, so that he who runs may read.

Oregon City insists that if the saloon man violates an ordinance relative to his business, he will be put out of business.

Oregon City is now asked to enact an anti-treating ordinance, which will mean that every man pays for his own drink, or goes without.

But, with all of these restrictions, and the one proposed, there are 16 saloons in Oregon City, which is more than plenty. One of them is a "beer" saloon, so that the revenue of the city from licenses is not quite $16,000 per annum.

We really feel some sympathy for the saloon man, but we cannot undertake to fight his battles while we have so many troubles of our own.

There must be a fine profit in the saloon business, or the pockets of the saloon man would not stand for this sort of pressure.

Heart to Heart Talks.

A STORY FOR GIRLS.

This is a true story I got from an old newspaper man concerning Chief Justice White of the supreme court.

It is a love story.

Years ago when Mr. White was a young law student at Louisville he did not look the man he has become. He was verdant, awkward, self-conscious, but there was a certain something about him that bespoke a strong character.

He fell in love with one of the beauties of the city and was accepted. White told his sweetheart they must wait until he could get a foothold in business.

Enter another suitor. The latter was rich and the son of one of the leading families. The girl threw White over and married the wealthy young man.

Which nearly broke White's heart. Though in the end it made a man of him.

White became a great lawyer and went to the senate from Louisiana. President Cleveland made him a justice of the supreme court, and later President Taft promoted him to be chief justice; a position esteemed by some as higher than that of president.

Again the whirligig of time brought White and the proud Blue Grass belle together.

On the day that Justice White was sworn in a pale woman sat in the supreme court chambers. She wore widow's weeds and had known many vicissitudes. A suitor at the bar of the august tribunal, tears filled her eyes, tears of memory and regret.

She knew the new judge, but he did not suspect that behind her veil was the face of his old sweetheart.

The woman at last reported was employed in one of the departments at Washington, but the chief justice knows nothing of her. She is not of those who attend high functions.

Girls—

Be careful how you mistreat or despise that honest, energetic young fellow who comes courting you, who asks you to wait until he can make a home for you.

Look to the outcome. Has he limbs and character? If so you can afford to wait.

When Abraham Lincoln went courtship Miss Todd, the Kentucky belle, he was not handsome or cultured, and he had for his rival the fine appearing, prosperous lawyer, Stephen A. Douglas.

But Miss Todd, with rare discernment, saw the superiority of the awkward Lincoln.

When looking for a husband look to the man's exterior—

And wait!

Head of Oliver Cromwell Is on Exhibition in British Museum

OLIVER CROMWELL, or what is left of him, has been photographed at last. When he was alive and was known as "the Protector" photography was unknown, and our only ideas of his appearance are obtained from paintings, and artists are not always accurate, especially when their subject is a man as powerful and as influential as Cromwell was during the later years of his life.

But the above picture shows what Cromwell's head looks like today, for the photograph was made only a short time ago in the British museum, where it was deposited recently by the Rev. H. H. Wilkinson. He said it had been in his family for three generations. Cromwell died in 1658 while he was still the lord protector of Great Britain. The protectorate lasted about a year after his death, and some months later parliament ordered that Cromwell's body be removed from Westminster abbey and hanged on the gallows at Tyburn, while the head was set on a pole on the top of Westminster hall. The head blew down and was picked up by a sentry, who secreted it for many years. The gruesome relic passed through several hands and was exhibited in various private museums until it came into the possession of the Wilkinson family. The picture above shows the head as it appears today and also a likeness of Cromwell painted by George Walker.

Public Control Will Prevent Selfishness

By Cardinal GIBBONS

AN important condition in the industrial development of this country is the fact that the right of the people to FAIR AND HONEST TREATMENT by the big business interests is daily becoming more widely recognized by broad minded and progressive men.

Laws are being passed and enforced for the proper regulation and control of great corporations, particularly public service companies, and the rights of the people are each year being better guarded and protected.

The public has a right to EXERCISE intelligent control over corporations which serve it with necessities. No friend of his race can contemplate without painful emotions HEARTLESS monopolists exhibiting a grasping avarice which has dried up every sentiment of sympathy in the public and created a sordid selfishness which is deaf to cries of JUSTICE AND FAIR TREATMENT.

PUBLIC CONTROL AND REGULATION WILL PREVENT SUCH CONDITIONS. THE HEALTHY COMBINATION OF HUMAN FORCES IN THE ECONOMIC WORLD CAN ACCOMPLISH RESULTS WHICH COULD NOT BE EFFECTED BY ANY INDIVIDUAL EFFORTS.
