DISTURBED MEXICO.

It is easy to believe the report that the government at Washington is more disturbed over the situation in Mexico than it was at any previous period in the rebellion. At any hour a crisis may come which will compel the United States to step in. While the American people are opposed to any meddling by our government in the quarrel between Gen. Diaz and his insurgent fellow-countrymen, conditions may arise which would force us to intervene. Over 75,000 Americans reside in Mexico, and we have more than $1,000,000,000 capital invested there. England, France and Germany also have subjects and cash in that republic. We are under some obligation to protect all these. Some anxiety has been expressed at London, Berlin and Paris over the outlook for their people in Diaz's domain, and this feeling is something which he has to reckon with. Those countries look to us to guard their subjects in the disturbed region, and our government will meet this demand as far as it can.
In the present situation in Mexico says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, the issue of peace or war rests with Diaz himself. Apparently the rebels will accept no adjustment which does not include a promise by Diaz to step down from office either immediately or as soon as peace terms are arranged. The rebels have been emboldened by their recent successes, but particularly by the feebleness of the Diaz forces. On paper the Mexican standing army was about 20,000, but not half of that number has revealed itself during the insurrection. Apparently not more than 5000 or 6000 have come in contact with the rebels at the various points of the disturbance. Less than that number are in the City of Mexico and its vicinity, so far as can be learned. The weakness of the fight which Diaz has made has surprised the world. Not only is his army far smaller than the world believed it to be, and than the Mexican Government said it was, but the area of the disaffection is much broader than its spokesmen have conceded.

Senators La Follette and Bristow are beginning to feel a little homesome as insurgent insurgents.

Senator Stone's attempted elucidation of reciprocity is about as timely and valuable as his war whoop on the Mexican situation.

Bangor has started to rebuild. Plucky, but the European system of preventing conflagrations would be better.

Whatever may happen in Mexico Uncle Sam can not be charged with having been delayed in getting a suitable place as an observer near the spot.

Now that the suburban places are in their pink and green glory the home builders turn out to choose what pleases them best in the embarrassment of riches.

Gov. Woodrow Wilson will have a clearer idea of the outlook for 1912 now that he has personally looked over Republican Missouri, the state that stood firm in 1910.

Cathedral of St. John the Divine Will Be Fourth in Size

WHEN the Cathedral of St. John the Divine is completed on Morning-side heights, New York city, America will have the fourth in size of the world's great churches. Only St. Peter's at Rome, the Cathedral of Seville and the Duomo at Milan are larger than the one gradually being built in America's metropolis. St. Peter's covers an area of 227,000 square feet, nearly twice its nearest rival. The Cathedral of St. John the Divine will cover 99,500 square feet, the famous Westminster cathedral of London having only two-thirds of that area. The part of the newest cathedral shown in the above picture is only a tremendous fragment of what the entire edifice will be. It has been twenty years in the building and cost $3,500,000. Just when the entire structure will be finished no one knows. Neither does one know what the cost will be. Nowhere in the world in modern times has there been such a great undertaking in church building. The portion of the cathedral now under roof will ultimately support a dome and tower which will be mounted by a cross 425 feet above the floor of the nave. Much of the building as seen now is merely temporary, though it may stand for years. The columns surrounding the altar are of granite, each being in two pieces and weighting 150 tons. It took four years to quarry the columns, polish them and put them in place. Each column cost $25,000, and each will stand as a memorial of the man whose name is carved on its base. There is no steel work in the building, only pure masonry being employed.

Peony Bush Attracts.
A peony bush in the court house yard is covered with pink blossoms and is attracting much attention, and Peter Nehren, who has charge of the grounds, prides himself of having one of the handsomest bushes in the city. The plant has been well taken care of by the owner.

BIRTHDAY PARTY GIVEN

Those present were Clark Dewey, Elizabeth Moore, Dan Alldredge, Myrl Howell, Catherine Lewis, Thelma Melien, Wanda Mellien, Inez and Irene Lewis, Grace Kellough, Charlie Flagler, Hason abnard and Grace Alldredge.

Mrs. N. M. Alldredge Entertains For Little Daughter.
Mrs. N. M. Alldredge entertained on Tuesday afternoon at her home on Ninth and Pierce streets in honor of her little daughter, Grace's, fifth birthday anniversary. Mrs. Alldredge was assisted by Mrs. G. J. Howell, and the little ones attending had a most delightful time playing games. Misses Edith Alldredge and Madeline Moore assisted in entertaining the young people. Refreshments were served. The house was prettily decorated with cut flowers. Little Grace was presented with many pretty gifts as a remembrance of this happy occasion.

MOHAIR IS HELD FOR BETTER PRICE

FARMERS ANTICIPATE DEMAND AND DEALERS CANNOT GET SUPPLIES

PORTLAND FIRMS SEND MEN HERE

Strawberries Sold in Oregon City Markets For First Time This Year — Supply Small.

Mohair prices show an upward tendency which has evidently been anticipated by the farmers. There is little mohair on the market and many farmers are holding their crops for a better market. H. W. Metzger, the Portland dealer, and representatives of other dealers have made futile trips to Oregon City to replenish their supplies.

THE FUTURE AMERICAN

Will Be of Indian Type Will Be a Dark, Swarthy Man

By Dr. A. E. JENKS of the University of Minnesota By Professor F. E. PUTNAM of Harvard

THE TYPICAL AMERICAN OF THE FUTURE WILL BE OF THE INDIAN TYPE, DARK EYED, BLACK HAIR AND DARK SKINNED.

Today there are the two types, the blond and the brunette. The brunette is furnished by the immigration from southern Europe. In color of skin, hair and eye they now approximate the Indian type, and their evolution will be more rapid than that of the blond.

The blond comes largely from northern Europe. In the immigration from southern Europe, whence the brunette comes, there will inevitably be an infusion of the dark strain into the blond. Just what influence it will have will depend directly on the amount to which the races inter-

THE AMERICAN OF THE FUTURE WILL BE A MUCH DIFFERENT PERSON THAN THE AMERICAN OF TODAY, AND HE WILL IN ALL LIKELIHOOD BE A DARK, SWARTHY MAN IN CONTRAST TO THE LIGHTER INDIVIDUAL OF THE PRESENT.

I think that the color of the people of this country will be much darker than the average today.

It is natural enough that owing to the crowded conditions of life in the cities this acquaintance and intermarriage should occur in the cities more rapidly than in the country. With the large number of dark skinned persons from southern Europe who settle in the cities we find there the evidences of the general darkening of the American who is descended from intermarriages of blonds and brunettes.
