

COW MAKES AMAZING RECORD FOR BUTTER

YIELD IS 37.67 POUNDS IN SEVEN DAYS—TEST IS NOT FINISHED.

The following letter, reprinted from Hoard's Dairyman, gives a description of the most wonderful cow on record:

Hoard's Dairyman.—We breeders of Northern New York are jubilant of this glorious victory just won by Mr. E. H. Dollar and his wonderful dairy animal, Pontiac Pet. But three weeks ago Mr. Dollar and I were looking over a "Pet" in a pen stall, and I said "Pet, she is capable of the world's record if you can get at her." Mr. Dollar was suffering from a severe attack of the rheumatism then and things looked pretty blue for him. We left that evening for a trip down the state to purchase a carload of the black and white on our return. Pet had given birth to a beautiful bull calf and was in a most ideal condition for the record.

Mr. Dollar was better and when the week was up they began the race for the victory that was won with nearly a half a pound of butter to spare over the wonderful record of Pontiac Clothilde DeKok 2nd.

You will want to know about the man and the cow that won this victory for I view this achievement as more than man or cow.

The man: Mr. Dollar came home from the busy life of a mercantile business in New York City to take charge of the Dollar Homestead on the passing away of his father. This was but a little over a decade ago. He has put into the business the alert, quick preceptiveness that he acquired in his brief sojourn in the city. This, with the vigor, the sturdiness, the practical and acquired facilities of a country reared young man put in on these factors means success in any business. He has made and is making his farm into one of the greatest dairy farms in the world. It is a hand-made farm so to speak. All made from the ability and vigor of Mr. Dollar and his family. Mr. Dollar's own words to me, recently said, "I don't know how to describe Pontiac Pet, but she is a wonder. She does things with all the will and force there is in me" and he does things that way. It is such a man that was behind "Pet" and she had to do things at the pail that made her the world's record breaker. The dairy world should honor Mr. Dollar.

The cow: Pontiac Pet is a wonderful, motherly formed individual, very open in contour, with those wide, open legs that give a large heart girth and capacious chest, with well sprung and open ribs that give a roomy, digestible cavity, with wide apart hips and loins that make a large maternal cavity, covered by a medium, unctuous, full of milk, skin, all of which goes to "make up" the dairy animal. She is a daughter of Pontiac Kornydock out of a low record daughter of Hengerveld DeKok.

I think it was more in her development than in anything else that has given her the chance and the ability to make the wonderful record that she has. Calving as a senior two-year-old at two years, 10 months, 17 days, and beginning her first record, she produced 15,645 lbs. of butter from 296.5 lbs. of milk in 7 days, and in 29 days, 64,856 lbs. from 1276.7 lbs. milk. As a junior four-year-old, she made 27.2 lbs. butter from 485.6 lbs. milk in seven days, and 112,056 lbs. of butter in thirty days from 2018.3 lbs. milk. At six years of age she made 39.01 lbs. butter from 483.5 lbs. milk in seven days, and 116,907 lbs. butter from 2038.1 lbs. milk in thirty days.

Now as a seven-year-old she makes 37.67 pounds of butter in seven days, and her thirty-day record has not been completed yet. You will see that she must have been a large and well-grown two-year-old. She was given a good test and a thirty-day record at her first calving. At every test her function has been noticed and invigorated by a good long test. At the present test Mr. Dollar had her condition and in shape to do her utmost.

To one not versed in handling cattle it would be hard to make them believe you could make such a change in an animal. But to one who watches their development and sees these changes go on he can see wherein some one will bring out a forty pounder within the next five years. Yes, I am going to give you breeders two years to do the stunt. You have got to harden one ahead of you to beat Dollar.

Pontiac Pet, we bow to you as well as your owner, and we Holstein-Friesian breeders can congratulate ourselves over this new record.

A Man In Wolf's Clothing

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN
Copyright by American Press Association 1911

Leaving Gibraltar. I crossed the strait and landed in Tangier. The transition from an English army post to an Arab town is about as marked as any that can be made. At Tangier one finds about him the swarthy native, wearing the baracan, a long white cotton garment—probably the toga of the Romans, who once conquered his country, handed down to the present day—and of a different religion from what he has left on the other side of the strait, if his system of superstition can be called religion.

At Tangier I outfitted for a trip to the great desert of Sahara, aiming to penetrate as far south as Tuat, thence northward to Tripoli. I had several camels and a dozen men as servants and guards.

There is no lonelier place on the face of the earth than the desert, though I will admit that on a starlight night there is a solemn grandeur about it. When we were not moving at night instead of the day I established a guard about my camp just as if we were an army marching through an enemy's country, and, strange to say, this vigilance was simply exercised against thieves and robbers. The ingenuity of these lying rascals is remarkable. They are natural spies. They would come into our camp in the most friendly way for the purpose of theft, if they could get their hands on anything, and, if not, to gather information as to how they could rob us at another time.

One day a band of Tuaregs, as they are called, came into camp for the purpose, I felt sure, of observation. They numbered about as many as we, but as my force was under the command of a European and well armed they would not think of attacking us. That same night my sentinel—I put one man on guard—was shot dead. I heard the distant crack of a rifle and, calling several of my men, hurried them out in different directions after the murderer. I went myself, but saw nothing, only the great sandy billows. One of my men reported seeing a wolf running away, but no human being was found.

The next day we buried the murdered man and proceeded on our way. That night while every one except the man on guard was asleep there was another crack, and a sentry was killed. Again I deployed my men, proceeding farther than before, but not even a wild animal was found. There was ample opportunity for any one to hide among the sand billows, and by covering himself with his baracan he was not likely to be seen. At any rate, we were obliged to give up the search.

I estimated that the party of Tuaregs who had visited our camp were hovering near us, intending to pick off a man every night till our number should be so reduced as to render us an easy prey. Their camels, our tents, our supplies, our arms and ammunition would fall into their hands. The outfit would be a fortune to them. I concluded that I must stop their game at all hazards.

The next night I planted a tent pole in the ground, fired a crossbow to it, and, trying some sparrows grass about the tent, I made the body of a mankin. This I covered with a baracan and put a fox on the head. Thus I had a dummy sentinel who might be shot to pieces without being hurt. I had taken care to fix our camp on the edge of an oasis, where I could eliminate the approach in one direction, and noted a convenient place of concealment—a hole in the ground—a few hundred yards from the camp. Soon after dark, taking a rifle, I went out to my hole. The moon gave sufficient light for me to see any one approach the camp.

I had a long wait, for it was near dawn before I saw any living thing, and then nothing more than a wolf prowling around in search of something to eat. But, having nothing else to watch, I watched the wolf. He would stop here and there and dig up the sand, then go on, with his nose to the ground, to another spot and dig again. All the while he was nearing the camp. Presently he stopped and after turning in a circle lay down. He was lost to view, but I kept my eye fixed on the spot where I had last seen him.

Suddenly at a point still nearer the camp I saw a flash, heard a crack, and the wolf, raising himself on his hind legs, ran away like a deer.

I had a good view of the creature's silhouette against a line of dawn, and I am a good shot on the wing. Hissing my rifle, I achieved an excellent aim and fired. The wolf pitched forward and lay still.

I had instructed my foreman, Hamet, that if he heard a shot to wake the men and if he heard a second one to bring them out. In a few minutes they came running toward me. I called to them and joined them. Then we went to the body of the wolf I had slain. We found him to be one of the Tuaregs who had come into our camp a few days before, a villainous looking rascal, who seemed to be a sort of shik among them.

We scoured the country for awhile, but found no one else. Trust an Arab for finding a place of concealment.

I took similar precautions the next night and for several nights, but we were not troubled again in the same way. Doubtless the robbers, knowing that we had got on to their game, gave it up.
