USE OF THE REFERENDUM.

Over two years ago Oregon faced a fight against an appropriation for its State University. The appropriation made by the State Legislature was continuing, that is the bill provided that the amount appropriated should be paid for the maintenance of the institution each year, without further legislation.

There was a vicious contest made against the appropriation. Hundreds of members of the Patrons of Husbandry in this State thought the amount appropriated was too great. Members of the United Alumni Association rallied to the support of their school, and finally the appropriation was saved with a very close margin.

Clarkamas county went on record against the appropriation. The sentiment was against the institution's liberal support, at least the vote in the country districts was overwhelmingly against the measure.

It was openly asserted after the campaign that the appropriation was saved only by the vote of the respectable North End of Portland, where the voters cared little for the preservation of support of the leading educational institution of the State.

This week one H. J. Parkinson, until recently editor of the Portland Labor Press, filed referendum petitions against the appropriations made in behalf of the school by the Legislature of 1911.

The referendum is getting to be rather a dangerous weapon in the hands of unscrupulous people. It was intended to be a check upon the legislature and no more.

It will be in every particular a first-class establishment. The capital stock of the company is $50,000. The present machinery includes one full set of modern cylinder description, with capacity to turn out about 1500 pounds of paper per day.

When the stock is first received it is weighed, and then hoisted to the fourth story of the main building, used as a stockroom. As it is wanted it is passed through an opening to the third story, or sorting room, where the process of sorting the material for each particular kind of paper is gone through with, and the rags are sorted and put in proper bins.

Next passes to the second story, where it is subjected to a process of cutting and dusting, thence it passes into the first story, where it is bleached, and after passing the engines is collected in large elliptic tubs, where it is ground into pulp. The pulp now passes to the "stuff chest," from whence it is pumped up to the paper machines, where the nicest process is performed.

After leaving the "stuff chest" the pulp passes into a vat, where it forms into a sheet, on a wire cylinder, the water being all extracted by a fan wheel, and turned back to another section of the vat, to pass through the same process over and over again.

leaving the pulp to adhere to the filing machine as it moves along through the first press rolls. At this point the sheet has vitality sufficient in itself to bear its own weight, and it passes on through the second press rolls, next to the drying cylinders, thence through the calendars, next on the reels and finally to the cutters, where the paper is laid off in sheets, and taken by the help to the finishing rooms, where it is counted, folded, pressed, banded, and next finds its way to market.

Taken throughout the work of making paper is one of rare interest. The mill in this city is really a credit to the superintendent, Mr. W. W. Back, and chief architect, and millwright, Mr. A. M. Hardin, and an honor to the enterprise of its projectors.

There is a great demand for materials by which it may be kept in active operation when once under way. The market for paper on this coast the past two years has been poorly supplied, and most kinds have been high and constantly hardening.

The two mills of California at Taylorville and Santa Cruz, have been but a mere "drop in the bucket," as it were, as while they have been constantly employed prices of paper still gradually advanced with a very scant supply.

In 1865 the pioneer paper mill at Taylorville manufactured 5,620 reams of news, and 6,840 reams of wrapping. They are doing even better than that the present year, and yet they are unable to fill their orders.

Proposes to End Revolution In Mexico by Dry Farming

ZEPHERINO DOMINGUEZ, a Mexican millionaire farmer, has proposed a plan to end the Mexican revolution by giving each of the dissatisfied natives a small tract of land and then teaching them how to get good crops from it by the form of cultivation known as "dry farming."

Accompanying the letter to Jose Yves Limantour, minister of finance, in which he outlines his plan, Senor Dominguez sent a photograph of himself, which is reproduced above. In his right hand he holds a bunch of frijoles (beans) grown on one of his haciendas by irrigation, while in his left hand he has a bunch of the same vegetable grown on the same ranch by dry farming.

Under the right hand are ears of corn grown by irrigation, while under the left hand is corn grown by dry farming. Minister Limantour has endorsed the plan suggested by Senor Dominguez. The wealthy farmer has a ranch in Puebla, the heart of the locality where the revolution originated. Each of the 500 men employed on the ranch has two and a half acres of land for his own use, and he is allowed time to cultivate it.

HOLDERS ASKING $30 TON FOR WHITE OATS

BUYERS REFUSE TO PAY ADVANCE—STOCK AT INTERIOR POINTS SMALL.

Following a slight decline in oats holders at Wauwate points were holding out for $30 a ton, with no sales at that price.

While some dealers say they are unable to purchase No. 1 white oats under $29.50, others say they are offered plenty of this variety at $29, but are in no hurry to take hold.

Stocks of oats at interior points are so limited that only a nominal number of cars are available for this loading and it would cost $20 to land supplies here.
