An Interval

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"It's queer how little difference ten years will make in the look of persons when you're with 'em all the time and how much difference it makes when you don't see 'em. And if you don't see 'em for a matter of twenty years, why, you don't know 'em at all."

The words were spoken by Joshua Sparks to his friend, Mahuida Stickler. "Yes, Mr. Sparks, and that's the reason I don't take stock in the idea that love is anything more'n livin' together."

"I knew of a case of that kind once. It came under my own observation. You know Martha Winkles. Don't you?"

"Yes, I know her; she's a skinny old maid."

"Wasn't when Martha was a girl she was as pretty as any 'em. I was a little soft on her myself then. But I didn't have no chance. She was set on Ben Higgins, as fine a lookin' young man as ever handled a pitchfork. And Ben was set on her. They was the loveliest couple I ever see. They was goin' to get married when Ben was tuk sick. He was sick a long while, and when he got well the doctor said he'd better go off somewhere else to git a change of air."

"Ben, he went to Colorado, where the air is dry and pure. He tuk a picture of Martha with him, and they both said their love was the undyin' kind. It didn't matter how long they might be separated, neither of 'em would marry any one else, and they would marry each other when they come together ag'in."

"Ben was twenty when he went away and Martha was nineteen. The separation was longer than either of 'em had any idee of when they parted. Ben was five years gittin' back his health. By that time he thort he'd come to an age when he'd like to have a little somepin laid up before he got married. So he worked and worked, but somehow riches didn't come. It was twenty-one years before he got back."

"Neither he nor Martha was much at writin', even when he went away. First of they wrote once a month, then once a year, and after that it was once in five years. But they was true to each other all these years."

"Ben was forty-two years old when he come back. He come to me first before seein' Martha at all. I didn't know him. Some men looks purty young at forty-two, some looks purty old. Ben was one of the old purty kind. He wore specs, his head was smooth as a billiard ball, and what hair there was on the sides was grizzly gray."

"Don't y'know me, Josh?" he said. "I'm Ben Higgins."

"Wasn't to be perille I told him I'd had trouble with my eyes."

"He told me that he'd come home to marry Martha. He'd made some money during the last few years and was lookin' forward to the realization of the dream of his life. He tuk the picture of Martha out of his pocket and showed it to me. My sakes, how far away it seemed! There sat a purty young gal that I'd known twenty years before. Now she was gray in the front of her head, and the wrinkles over her face and neck and arms and hands. I guess it makes a woman look 'lookin' to wait for a lover. Anyway, she looked just as if she could bite off a tenpenny nail."

"Ben," says I, "Martha's changed a bit since that was taken."

"Mebbe," he said, "she might have changed somewhat. I'm goin' to see her tonight, and I'll see how much she's altered."

"Come round to my house to supper," I said. "You can go to see Martha afterwards."

"All right," he answered; "I will."

"I asked Martha to come to supper, not tellin' her she was to meet her old lover. I wanted to see 'em when they first saw each other. I didn't go to no trouble of introducin' 'em, as city folks do. Martha she sat at one end of the table by my wife, and Ben sat by me, the yunkers between. Consequence was that Ben and Martha didn't have nothin' to say to each other. Fact is they didn't appear to take no interest into each other. When Ben and I got up from the table I asked him if he wouldn't like to go out and look at the stock. He said he would, and we went to the barn."

"After awhile Ben said he guessed he'd go and see his old love. Then I told him Martha had been settin' at the other end of the table at supper."

"You ought to seen the way he looked at me. There was a pained expression, as though he had built a beautiful structure over him away up into the sky and it had collapsed and come down on his head. The first thing he said was:

"Did she know who I was?"

"No, but my wife has told her by kin's time."

"I saw he'd better not go to see Martha right off, and I told him so. He agreed with me. When my wife told Martha that she had set at the same table with her old lover she acted about the same way as Ben did. She didn't go home that evening, fearin' he would go to see her."

"Ben stayed around here for awhile. He and Martha used to meet once in awhile, but they pertended not to know each other for what they was when young. Bimeby Ben went back to Colorado, and Martha said she could breathe free once more."

OMAHA TO HOLD BIG TENNIS EVENT

National Clay Court Championships to Be Held Aug. 5 to 12.

RECORD ENTRY LIST EXPECTED

Over One Hundred and Seventy Experts From Different Sections of the Country Have Announced Their Intention of Competing in the Event.

Judging by present indications the national clay court tennis championships to be held in Omaha Aug. 5 to 12 will be the greatest ever held. Already over 175 racket experts from different sections of the country have announced their intention of competing in the different events.

With an entry list of 163 players, the first clay court national event last year made its mark as the greatest of the kind ever held. The comparison between that record and what is promised for the coming tourney shows that the approaching event will be at the limit of rosette possibilities.

It is reported that the Pacific Coast Tennis association will send a classy delegation to Omaha, the delegation to travel eastward first and engage in contests beyond the Mississippi river. It will be composed of Bundy, McLaughlin, Summer, Hardy and Miss Hotchkiss. The men, it is almost assured, will swing back to Omaha from Chicago after the event in the last named city, which occurs the week before the Omaha tourney.

Melville Long of San Francisco, present holder of the clay court championship, will of course be on hand at the meet to defend his title against all comers. There is a mighty fine chance of the redoubtable Long relinquishing the coveted prize, too, according to a great many enthusiasts who are in on the "know," their beliefs being applied to three or four speedy racket men from the east and south. It is expected that Champion William A. Larned, Benis Wright, William J. Clothier and several other big eastern men will be on hand.

One of the fortunate features of the approaching national tourney is the fact that it occurs at a time when there is no other meeting of tennis men to conflict.

SNODGRASS DISAPPOINTMENT

Last Year Batting Star, but This Season Has Fallen by Wayside.

What is the matter with the batting of Snodgrass? Last year the New York Nationals' young center fielder was a big stickler with a top notch average, leading the National league in hitting all one period of the race. This year he has been unable to keep up the good work, and the fans are wondering why. Maybe the opposing pitchers have discovered a weak point and are working it for all they are worth. There's a bond of sympathy among batters, by the way, for the moment a pitcher discovers the vulnerable spot in a batsman's makeup he generally communicates the information to his fellow craftsmen. This freemasonry has existed for many years.

New York to Halifax Yacht Race. The Brooklyn Yacht club's race from New York to Halifax, N. F., will take place July 22. The distance is 645 miles, and it will be open to motorboats measuring from forty-five to eighty feet. Trophies and $1,000 in cash go to the winner in each case.

RURAL CARRIERS TO MEET ON LABOR DAY

EUGENE TO GET CONVENTION INSTEAD OF PORTLAND AS FIRST ARRANGED.

The Oregon Rural Letter-Carriers' Association will meet in Eugene, Or., September 3 and September 4. At the last convention it was decided to meet in Portland, but many requests urged changing of the time and place of the meeting. By meeting on Labor Day many more men will be able to attend.

Franz Krasberger, president of the association, is urging as many members as possible to be present. Many new names have been added, and the association expects to be on a regular annual convention basis before another year. Several Clackamas county carriers expect to attend.

The Square Grocery Store

Measure Value

To be "on the square" is so essential in our life that only those who practice it can hope to win out. Squareness means friendship between a store and its customers.

On this rock of honesty has our growing business been built. You find sixteen ounces to the pound or four quarts to the peck, in your purchases—the quality and value of our groceries are as sure as the rising sun. The high standard of our customers is a safe guide to our methods.

It is nice to know with whom you deal isn't it? We are always the same—the Square deal grocery.

For weight, and measure, value, and quality this store cannot be beaten in this town.
