Parents Are Making Things Too Easy For Their Children

By Rev. JOHN T. STONE of Chicago

THE GREAT DANGER WHICH FACES THE HOME LIFE OF TODAY IS THAT YOUNG PEOPLE WILL HAVE THINGS TOO EASY BECAUSE OF WHAT THEIR PARENTS DO FOR THEM.

It isn't always good to have EVERYTHING you want. It is a good thing to have obstacles to OVERCOME.

polices—death claims, endowments and dividends—the transactions of the regular life insurance companies continued to increase last year, under the normal conditions that prevailed.

An indication of normal business conditions in 1910, according to life insurance records in the New York insurance department, where 90 per cent of the insurance in force throughout the country must be accounted for, was the decrease of disbursements for surrendered, lapsed and purchased policies.

For policyholders who were able to hold their protection throughout the year dividend payments were increased largely. The record of dividends paid by the companies that reported in New York showed an increase to the amount of $10,839,572, compared with $9,195,734 for increase in 1909 and $7,730,107 for increase in 1908.

According to that record, a notable feature of the transactions was that the amount of the dividend distributions ($72,574,538) was $17,470 in excess of the amount of disbursements for surrendered, lapsed and purchased policies ($72,557,068).

SACRAMENTO TAKES FIRST FROM BEAVERS

SACRAMENTO, Cal., June 27.—(Special.)—Sacramento took a fall out of Portland today, the score being four to three. The Beavers started out like winners by making three tallies in the second, third and fourth, but Sacramento gradually overhauled them and won in the ninth.

Pole Vaulting Requires Nerve As Well as Skill and Strength

Pole vaulting is a form of athletics that is a tremendous strain on the contestants. It requires strength, skill and nerve, and there is also an awful jolting when the vaulter drops after letting go of the pole that has enabled him to throw his body ten or twelve feet into the air.

BIG WRESTLING BOUT TO BE HELD TONIGHT

JOHN BERG AND STRANGLER SMITH GRAPPLE IN OREGON CITY THIS EVENING.

Confident of winning his match with the winner of the Hackenschmidt-Gotch meet at Chicago on Labor Day, John Berg, known in the wrestling world as Young Hackenschmidt and the middleweight champion of the world, is anxious to leave for his training camp in El Paso, Texas.

Berg is in Portland this week where he came to look after the reality interest in which he invested on his last trip to Oregon two years ago, and he will make but one public appearance before returning to his Texas headquarters.

Berg and Smith have trained hard for their match here tonight, and both are in the pink of condition, each confident of his ability to win. If Smith succeeds in defeating Berg, it will be the first time that Berg has had his shoulders pinned to the mat since he first met Gotch several years ago.

As a prelude to his testimony Smith declared he knew nothing of the sugar business.

When he took the stand President Smith admitted that he personally owned 5,000 shares of the Utah-Idaho Sugar Company and held 49,815 shares for the Mormon Church.

A DISGRUNTLED DETECTIVE

By TOM BROWNELL. Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Being ambitious after reading sundry detective stories to enter the profession, I went to an office and asked for employment. It happened that a man was wanted to go among a gang of footpads and burglars disguised as one of their kind with a view to learning certain facts concerning them.

About 11 o'clock at night, disguised as a tough, I reeled into a saloon where my men were supposed to be. I found them there and invited them to drink. I treated several times and thought I was getting in with them when suddenly there was a hammering at the door, and the barkeeper cried: "Police! Git!"

I was taken to a station, and on the way I made myself known to the cop who walked beside me. He gave a broad grin and said that was the most beautiful device of all that was practiced in the criminal profession.

He didn't come till late in the afternoon, and when he did he didn't recognize me. I told him I was the man he had sent to the saloon for information, but he looked at me contemptuously and said that the man he had sent had likely met with foul play and I was trying to get out of a bad scrape by persuading him.

A week passed, and I was still a prisoner. Then one day I was indicted as one of the men in the saloon when the police made the raid, who had made away with the detective that the agency had sent out.

Here was a pretty how-de-do. I called again for the man who had sent me out, but he refused to come to see me, and I couldn't go to see him. I doubted if it would do any good if he came. He had never seen me but once, and then but for a moment.

I sent for a lawyer and told him my story. He appeared to believe me, but said there would be no use in putting such a story before a jury. It was so palpably false that it would prejudice my case.

My lawyer's method was very ingenious. Having entered my claim to be another person than myself, John Borland, he brought John Borland's mother into court to swear that her son on the night of the supposed murder was at home and in bed.

This is carrying informality to the point of ignorance, for if there is any reason why a loose garment is worn at a visiting hour it should at least be attractive and partially fitted to the figure.

To receive a man friend, in such attire would be a grave indiscretion, for men abominate the flowing, unattractive robe, and as it is always suggestive of the absence of corsets it seems on such occasions vulgar in the extreme.
