Nothing and Nobody. "You don't get along very well with your mother-in-law, I hear," said a friend to a young husband.

"No, I don't," answered the bridegroom. "Nobody can. Even the food she eats doesn't agree with her. When she comes into the room everybody shuts up. The other day she got into a folding bed and the bed shut up."

Ladies Home Journal.

Wind Shots. Two striking instances of the effects of "wind shots," or the currents of air caused by the enemy's cannon balls, are given in the "Autobiography of Sir Henry Smith." On one occasion his horse fell as if stone dead, but he was not hurt at all. On another occasion an officer was "knocked down by the wind of a shot and his face as black as if he had been two hours in a purplish rain."

SUMMER WRAPS. Silk and Lace Scarfs a Revival of Victorian Styles.

Among other early Victorian fashions which are coming back to us is the wearing of the short shoulder wrap which is known as the scarf. The one in the photograph resembles what was known several years ago as the dolman. It is made of silk and trimmed with a narrow plating. The rule in wearing the scarf is that it must harmonize with the dress and match the color of the hat. The scarf may be of Leisure and Labor. Lives there the man who has not sighed for leisure? And lives there the man who, in his more sober moments, has not been honestly glad that he must work? Human nature, which sweetens under toil, sours in leisure.

And it is by no means sure that the fall from innocence which first brought work into the world "and all our woe" was not bringing salvation disguised as labor. Faithfulness will dignify and beautify even drudgery; no matter what the work is, provided it is honest, if it is done well it commands our instinctive respect. Besides, if we did not all have to work so hard to keep alive the jails would have standing room only.—Boston Transcript.

Mixed Relationships. "I have always fancied," a correspondent writes, "that in the matter of odd personal relationships there was nobody in English history at all like Robert Boyle, the eminent man of science, who was described as the father of English chemistry and brother to the Earl of Cork." But this worthy, your readers may be interested to learn, has a rival in the renowned Devonian, Sir Humphrey Gilbert, the father of electrical science and half brother of Sir Walter Raleigh. This delightful touch I found in the Borough Guide to Dartmouth, a twopenny booklet issued under the auspices of the Dartmouth town council and the United Devon association. —London News.

The Power of the Breath. When you have breathed into a paper bag in order to inflate it, for the fun of popping it afterward with your fist, have you ever asked yourself what is the power of your lungs? You are aware that this force is capable of being measured by the instrument called the spirometer, which you will often see at fairs. You may replace this elaborate affair with a simple paper bag.

Let your bag be long and rather narrow, of a sufficiently strong fabric. Lay it flat on the edge of the table, its mouth toward you; charge it with gradually increasing weights, such as books; then begin to blow, and you will be fairly astonished at the weight your breath is able to balance. As soon as you have become expert you will find it quite easy to upset a couple of heavy books, one above the other, by blowing underneath them.—Magical Experiments.

Den, a Jolly Game. "Den" is a good out of doors game. Each boy takes the name of a wild beast and has a tree to himself, which represents his den. Any player who leaves his den is liable to be tagged by the next one out. The best runner generally starts out first, a second pursues him, and so on until all may be out at once. If a player can tag any one he has a right to capture, he takes him home to his own den, and the latter must help him to take the rest. The pursuer cannot be tagged while bringing home a prisoner.

A New Button Button. The orientals play "button" with a fruit stone. Instead of saying "Button, button, who's got the button?" the leader sings:

Something for all, a pip for one; Four o'clock seeds and pineapple bun; Powder, please and powder—run!

As the leader shouts the last word the child who has the stone starts for the goal, which he sometimes makes without getting caught; then he has the stone a second time.

A Summer Song. Butterfly, flutter by, skimming the clover; Bee, buzz your drowsy song over and over. Tell of the summer sun. Sing that the winter's done. Flutter by, butterfly; hum, golden rover.

Deep in the meadow the daisies are swinging. Out of the thicket a thrush song is ringing. Mellow wind, yellow light. All the world's warm and bright. Everything summer's dear praises is singing.

THE Ancient Incubator. Few of those who create with the chicken incubator problem and often fail to solve it realize how old an art they are struggling to master. Thousands of years ago Egyptians in one part of the world and the Chinese in another had the art of incubating eggs so highly developed that it was an hereditary profession, the secret of the successful process being handed down from father to son. The odd stores called "mammals" that the Egyptians used as incubators date back to remote antiquity. Even before the French revolution the Paris markets had incubator chickens thanks to the Bonaparte apparatus, which was invented in 1777.

Where It Belongs. "Why do they put the nation's flag on top of the schoolhouse?" asked the teacher who wanted to instill a patriotic lesson. "Please, ma'am," answered the head boy, "it's because the pole is there." —Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

For the Children

Three Grandsons of the German Kaiser.

The three handsome boys in the illustration are sons of Crown Prince William of Germany, eldest son of the Kaiser. They do not differ in appearance from youngsters that may be seen every day in this country. Royal birth, according to American ideas, adds nothing to a boy or girl. True worth is what we appreciate in this land of the free. The youngster on the left is Prince Wilhelm Frederick, born July 4, 1906; on the right is Prince Louis Ferdinand, born Nov. 9, 1907, and in the middle is little Prince Hubert, who will be two years old next September.

About the Flicker. The flicker, or yellow hammer, is one of the bird carpenters. Using his bill as a chisel, he builds his home by cutting a hole deep into a tree trunk or telegraph pole. The sharp, stout bill also comes in handy for grub hunting in the bark of trees. The flicker is a musician, the drummer of the bird orchestra, and he plays a great "rat-tat-tat" on tin roofs and drainpipes. Ants are a favorite delicacy, and for this reason he is often seen on the ground.

The flicker is handsomely colored. His gray head is set off by a crimson band. The brown back is evenly barred with black and shows a large white patch when he flies. The wings are black barred above and show a beautiful golden color underneath as he flies overhead.

A family of young flickers is most interesting to study. The little fellows are noisy in demanding their food and whine for it like a lot of young puppies. They gulp down worm after worm until one should think their stomachs would burst, but still they cry for more. As they grow older they become saucy and scream loudly if they see anything new or interesting. They soon learn good manners when they get out in the world and act as respectfully as any other bird.

IT is always the most expensive teas than are the best to brew or drink.

The Most important point to consider about tea is its suitability for brewing in the water of a particular district. Tea that would be good here, and brew into a splendid fragrant beverage, might be a rank failure somewhere else.

We buy our teas to suit the water of this district. You are therefore sure of getting tea that is all that tea should be—fragrant, refreshing and thirst-quenching. A trial will make you a constant user.

NEW SILK SCARF.

lace net or any diaphanous material and is often more for beauty than for use.

Among the attractive lingerie novelties of the year is a coat made of eyelet embroidery done in soft linen or batiste and mounted over a colored lining of surah or satin, taffeta or pongee. All the well known brilliant colors of the day are used for the lining, although some of the smart ones use all white and put on a deep hood collar of colored silk with a tassel to match at its end.

These coats are long, about to the knees, and have wide sleeves which come below the elbow and slope off to a point. They may have a collar and cuffs of heavy lace if one desires, but they are exceedingly pretty when left without any special ornament.

Worn over a thin, soft gown with a flat garden hat they combine to make a most artistic costume.
