PROTECTION AND THE CONSUMER

There is at least one organ of standard protectionism that is willing to admit that high protection robs the consumer. That organ is the Ohio State Journal of Columbus. In a recent issue it says: "Heretofore the accepted theory has been that rates of duty so high as practically to prohibit imports not only serve to cut off all revenue, but expose the consuming public to the extortion of private protected interests."

That is certainly one of the long ago proven theories on which opposition to the protective tariff is based. It is a new thing to see its correctness so frankly admitted by so staunch a standard advocate. Perhaps it did not realize the full significance of its admission.

The object of a protective tariff is primarily to shut off competition from abroad. Even if it is not altogether prohibitive, it nevertheless "exposes the consuming public to the extortion of private protected interests" to the extent that it is levied. A ten per cent tariff will expose the consuming public to ten per cent extortion, a hundred per cent tariff to hundred per cent extortion and a prohibitive tariff to whatever extortion the traffic will bear.

Many Eastern newspapers are patting the United States Senate on the back for its stand on the Bristow amendment to the change proposed in the Constitution providing for the direct election of United States senators. This amendment provides for Federal supervision over elections for United States senators, and the House has refused to concur, throwing the matter into conference. If the House and Senate are unable to reach an agreement, we shall again see the direct election of senators indefinitely postponed.

The position of the House is manifestly correct. We do not have Federal supervision over the election of members of the House, then why should we have it in the election to members of the Senate? It would only tend to complicate our elections. The Senators are elected, or are to be elected, by the people of the State, why then should not the elections be conducted by the State?

Agricultural co-operation seems to have taken a mighty hold on the German people. January 1, 1911, there were in Germany 24,175 agricultural co-operative societies. These are divided into 94 central co-operative societies, 15,616 rural credit banks, 2,263 butter societies, 151 societies for the sale of milk and 2,826 other co-operative societies. During 1910 there was a net increase of 812 co-operative societies in Germany, as compared with an increase of 1,048 in 1909 and 1,005 in 1908. Of the new co-operative societies formed in the past year 104 were organized for the employment of electrical engineering, 62 for the utilization of machines, 22 for water supply and 28 for the desiccation of butter. It will be noticed that by far the largest number of agricultural co-operative societies in Germany is composed of rural credit banks, there being over 15,000 of these.

George DeBok, the gardener of Willamette, has for some time been keeping the exhibition room supplied with samples of the season on display east turnip of the season on display Friday. Some of them weigh ten pounds.

J. O. Staats, of No. 602 John Quincy Adams street, Oregon City, has a display of cherries at the Promotion Office that is attracting much attention. The cherries are Maryland's and are on a branch one foot in length. There are 200 cherries in one cluster. Mr. Staats is First Deputy Sheriff of Clackamas county and is a loyal supporter of his home county.

A. A. Hoky, New Philadelphia, Ohio, called at the Promotion Office. He is looking over the county and thinks this is the right place for the farmer. He will buy a farm in Clackamas county as soon as he finds one that will suit his requirements. He was much pleased with the exhibition in the Promotion Office, noting that this county will grow all kinds of crops from strawberries to clover hay.

Mrs. H. S. Clyde, of Clackamas Heights, has a novel display of flowers at the Promotion Office. There are Canterbury Bells, a new flower to the residents of this state, in the display. Oregon climate and soil are suitable for growing flowers of all kinds.

Mrs. A. H. Harvey, of Twilight, brought to the Promotion Office on Thursday a collection of twelve varieties of roses, representing all the shades and tints that are found in Clackamas county.

Mrs. Harvey formerly lived in Kansas and says that the beautiful roses of Oregon were one of the attractions that brought her to Oregon City.

F. E. Miller, of Mulino, has on display a box of his famous berries which were originated by him. They are a large round berry with a good color and flavor. He has not decided upon a name for the new berry, but will probably call it the "Clackamas County Favorite."

ACTIVITY IN FRUIT MARKET ENCOURAGES

SUPPLIES OF SEVERAL VARIETIES OF CHERRIES ARE MEAGER.

There was a fairly satisfactory movement in all fruit lines Friday. Cantaloupes were more plentiful, but the weather favored the movement of this fruit and watermelons as well. Apricots and peaches were in liberal supply and retailers bought freely of both at the last prices quoted. The supply of fancy Bing and Lambert cherries was rather meager, and these generally were quoted at 12-13 to 15 cents a pound. Royal Annes were more in evidence at 7 to 8 cents, and other cherries were to be had at 6 to 7 cents.

Berries of all sorts, with the exception of strawberries, are coming in good quantities. Reds, blacks and logans all held at prices around $1.50 a crate.

FEARING EX-HUSBAND SHE HAS HIM JAILED

FORMER WIFE OF WILLIAM LILLY SAYS HE THREATENED HER LIFE.

William Lilly was arrested Friday in Parkville by Constable Brown, on a complaint made by his former wife, who charges that he has on several occasions threatened her life. Mrs. Lilly formerly lived in this city. She obtained a divorce about three years ago. Since then, she says, Lilly has caused her much worry and uneasiness. Justice of the Peace Samson fixed the defendant's bond at $1,000 and with Deputy Sheriffs Staats and Miles he was allowed to visit a brother-in-law in the county, who is expected to become his bondsman. The bond probably will be arranged today. Lilly denies the charges made in the complaint.

3 NURSES IMPERIL LIVES TO SAVE FAMILY

PORTLAND, Or., July 7.—(Special.)—Three graduate nurses have been for the past week fighting for the lives of the eight children of J. A. Davis, of 211 Market St., working day against odds and at night sleeping on mattresses in the garret of the house. Miss Adelaide Kirby, Miss Ethel Staley and Miss M. J. Lucas are the heroic women who are battling to save the family from the ravages of diphtheria. The children range in age from 3 to 14 years. Starting when there was no prospect of pay and doing all the work of the house as well as the nursing of the malignant type, the three women have succeeded in placing six of the eight beyond danger and may save another of the stricken family. The father yesterday rose from an attack of diphtheria, brought on by attending his children. Watching his little ones become ill one by one while he alone did all the housework, Mr. Davis finally succumbed and fell ill. Then the oldest daughter took up the management of the house, and when she collapsed the next in age took charge. A little girl of 10 was head of the house when the health authorities and the Elks took the case in hand. It is now likely that all the children will be saved, although one of the little "heads of the household" may pay for her love to the younger children with her life.
