MR. SUTHERLAND ENTERTAINS.

Once in a while some congressman breaks loose in Washington in an attack on the particular form of government that has become to be designated as the "Oregon System."

We do not know whether Mr. Sutherland accurately represents the sentiments of the majority of the people of his state, but we venture he does not.

While we, in Oregon, cannot endorse Mr. Sutherland's views, which are certainly not based upon a close acquaintance with the results of the "Oregon System," we cannot refrain from quoting some of his highly entertaining remarks, which follow:

Within the last few years the United States of America has become the field of operation for an amiable band of insurgent soothsayers, who have been going up and down the land indulging in cabalistic utterances respecting the initiative, referendum and recall, and divers and sundry other ingenious devices for realizing the millennium by the ready and simple method of voting it out of its present state of incubation.

The voice of the professional reformer is heard in the land insistently calling upon us to forsake the ancient and well-beaten paths along which we have proceeded, at least in security, for a century and a quarter and go headlong in new and unexplored directions, luckily to find ourselves in pleasant fields and firm footing or unluckily plunged over the precipice or engulfed in the dismal swamp. The distinguished Senator from Oregon (Mr. Bourne) is perhaps the greatest living exponent of this doctrine.

New York City is to have a 100-story building, 1,200 feet high. No doubt long distance elevator rides will be advertised for summer vacations.

READING CHARMS AT CHAUTAUQUA

K. Sadler lectured to a large audience of women on "The Culture of the Body." Dr. Baxter lectured later, and the Naval Reserve Band played several selections.

"Disease is the lowest order of physical sin," said Dr. William S. Sadler, who lectured on "How the Body Resists Disease." "God made pleasure but man made sin," continued the speaker.

Whiskey and Quinine Scored. Dr. Sadler dwelt upon the work of the blood cells and declared that the life of a white blood cell, which eats the germs, is eleven hours.

Newest "Queen of the Seas" Is Longer Than Tallest Building

THE newest vessel to gain the title of "queen of the seas" is the Olympic, which recently arrived at New York on her first voyage across the Atlantic.

The Olympic is a monster, as the above picture shows. She is 882 1/2 feet long, so long that it became necessary to lengthen her pier so that she could dock in New York.

VEGETABLES OBTAINED FOR FAIR EXHIBITS. E. C. BUCKLES BURIED WITH MASONIC RITES. The funeral of E. C. Buckles, who died at Phoenix, Arizona, on Friday, July 7, was held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Holman undertaking parlors, the Rev. S. A. Hayworth, pastor of the Baptist church, officiating, and the Masonic order, of which the young man was a member, having charge of the services.

Christ Naegli, of Mount Pleasant, dairyman and farmer, brought to this city Tuesday samples of remarkable vegetable growth which he placed on exhibit at the real estate office of Freytag & Money, near the Southern Pacific station.

Mr. Freytag is making a collection of fruits, vegetables and grasses for the state fair to be held at Salem, and for the county fair to be held at Canyon.

The County Fair Cucumbers

By M. QUAD. Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

When it was known that George Huggins, old bachelor, was paying his attentions to Lucy Smith, old maid, the people of Crosville said that it would be a good match on both sides.

Mr. Huggins had a little home of his own and kept bachelor hall. Miss Smith had a little income. The principals had known each other for years and love had come about through an incident.

The marriage day had not been set, but things were sliding along, when the county fair committee came out with the list of premiums for the fall fair, still many weeks away.

"Wah, George, I'm also going to raise one," was replied. "All right, but you'll waste your time."

"I know I shan't. I grew one over a foot long last year." "That won't be enough this time. I think you'd better grow squash or tomatoes. I don't think we should compete against each other."

"The matter was argued good naturedly, but no decision arrived at. "Lucy, dear, I ask this as a favor of you," said Mr. Huggins as he took her hand.

"George, dear, you can raise onions," was the reply. "But I saved your life when you fell into the well."

"But the water wasn't over my head, and I believe I could have climbed out anyhow." "I wouldn't have believed you were so stubborn."

"Nor I of you. I've always heard you were open to argument and were seldom in the wrong. Perhaps we have made a mistake?" "I hope not, but it looks queer to me that you stick out for cucumbers the way you do."

"And it looks just as queer to me, George, do you think a knight of old would have been as finicky as you are? No, sir—he would have told his lady love to go right ahead and given her all sorts of encouragement."

"But I want to beat old Deacon Swift. He has taken the prize on cucumbers for the last three years." "And he's the very man I want to beat. When his hog rooted up my garden last year he wouldn't pay a cent damages, but told me to sue and be hanged."

When Mr. Huggins left for home that night there was a chilliness in his parlor. He was still sticking on cucumbers. The question had become a broad one. His whole future happiness was at stake.

As time went on the cucumbers grew and grew. They grew by day and grew by night. And at last, when the day came that their stems were cut and they were carried off to the fair on pillows, one could detect no difference between them.

They were twins. It was said that the cucumber committee would have split the prize, but it didn't turn out so. Deacon Swift drove into the grounds with a whoop and a holler and unloADED a cucumber that took the cake by ten points.

They were aware of each other's presence, but hadn't spoken. Now they began to edge around nearer and after awhile found themselves face to face. "He's a mighty mean man!" exclaimed George.

"Perfectly contemptible!" "I feel sorry for you after all your trouble." "And I for you." "I want to get even with the deacon and I know of but one way. Will you help me?"

She took his arm, and they walked away, and next morning there was a wedding. Some folks have to go through just so much trouble to find happiness.
