Mr. Tabor will send for his family at South Dakota, as soon as he decides on his permanent location.

MINSTRELS TO SHOW HERE.

Harrison Bros.' Troupe Will Give Performance Monday.

Harrison Bros.' Minstrels played to a crowded tent last night. They were by far the finest minstrels that ever played in our city under canvas. Any one who likes minstrel shows could not help but be pleased at their singing and dancing, which was greeted by round after round of applause. The show is new, clean and up-to-date, replete with new songs, jokes and ludicrous situations and certainly deserving the excellent patronage which it received. A fine band also adds much to its attraction.—Alva Daily.

The Harrison minstrels will give a performance in Oregon City on the evening of July 17. A big parade will be given at noon.

KNIGHTS SURPRISE HANNIFINS.

Entertainment Given Couple Back From Old Home.

The Catholic Knights of the St. John's Catholic church met in regular session on Tuesday evening, after which they repaired to the home of Herbert Hanniffin on Fourteenth street, where they took Mr. and Mrs. Hanniffin by surprise, the couple just having returned from a trip to their old home at Canada. The evening was devoted to vocal and instrumental music, and was followed by an elaborate luncheon. There were about 40 in attendance, some of the knights being accompanied by their wives.

CHURCH CLASSES TO ENTERTAIN.

Misses Hall, of Tacoma, to Give Reading and Play.

The four classes of the Congregational church, the teachers of which are Mrs. Charles Woodward, Miss Belle Matley, Miss June Charman and Miss Alice Goettinger, are arranging for a recital to be given at the church on Tuesday evening of next week. The Misses Hall, of Tacoma, Wash., will entertain on the violin and by readings, and some of the young ladies of this city, members of the Congregational Sunday school, will also take part in the program. The entertainment will be followed by a reception in the church parlors.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

TO A JUNE BRIDE. Your honeymoon is over? And why? Precisely what you are asking. Is it not? And many another girl bride of June.

Honeymoon, honeymoon. Tell me why you fade so soon. Fading, fading, the waxed moon that nascent shone in the spongy days of matrimonial beginnings has long since grown dim, and then—across its face stole the shadow of routine commonplace. Your honeymoon was in eclipse.

Why? you ask. In you it is the leftover superstition. Just a little, of the ages, and you wonder: Was it the wrong day? Or that the sun did not shine? Or the planetary signs? No, my dear. It was none of these. The honeymoon came to an end because all things come to an end, especially things sentimental, sprouted and grown under the warm impulse of a novel condition.

It's fine up there in the rarefied air of the mountain top, but you do not stay. You come down into the prosaic valley to live.

That new husband of yours adapted himself sooner than you. He was obliged to plunge into his work. Stern duty pushed aside the idyls of the lover.

Poor child, it jarred you to come down to the ordinary, and I agree with you that honeymoons should last forever. Only they do not.

Humans are so constituted that they cannot continue to bill and coo without sometimes yawning and wishing for a change. There's a bit of philosophy in the adage that "familiarity breeds contempt"—not contempt, perhaps, but satiety.

Do not grieve over the setting of your honeymoon. Cherish the memory of it.

You see, my dear, you and he must have a tryst. You scarcely know each other. In the friction that comes in double existence you are to learn to respect each other. Love is built on mutual respect.

Besides, love is devotion, and devotion requires time for exercise and expression. It may require misunderstandings and quarrels, maybe, and tears to work it out all right according to the story books.

Never mind, little girl. Other moons will wax and wane. None of them may so drip with honeyed sweets, but they will be silvery, happy moons.

Last Car Leaves For Oregon City at Midnight

Scene from Mrs. Fiske in "Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh" at Heilig Theatre.

Famous American actress and The Manhattan Company will present the comedy-drama "Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh," at the Heilig Theatre, Seventh and Taylor streets, for three nights, beginning Thursday, July 13. Matinee Saturday.

MRS. FISKE.

Mrs. Fiske and the Manhattan Company in "Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh" is the attraction announced for three nights, beginning Thursday, July 13, at the Heilig, and in this there is strong gratification for the management as well as the public, which has been so loyal to Mrs. Fiske and appreciative of the art which is the most dominant figure on the American stage today.

All who are interested in the better things of the stage; in the great good that the stage as an institution is capable of accomplishing; in worthy effort always worthily directed; in intellectuality as a moving force in the drama and in the personality which is the greatest hope of our stage, will be interested in Mrs. Fiske's coming engagement.

Her new piece is the comedy in which she has recently been so successful in New York, and it will be found entirely different from any other play in which Mrs. Fiske has ever been seen here. Broad comedy has not heretofore been associated with Mrs. Fiske, but when her comprehensive and comprehending art is brought to bear upon that type of dramatic creation, the result can easily be predicted. New York declared the play a joy and Mrs. Fiske's work in the title role a revelation.

RALPH BURD, 12 YEARS OLD, RIVER VICTIM

the first to try to recover the body with grappling hooks. They were joined by a score of others, including Earl Lutz, of J. Levitt's department store.

Dynamite is Exploded.

After working for about two hours Harry Jones, the contractor, set off two charges of dynamite in the water, but that did not cause the body to rise. In the meantime William S. Sadler, who has been lecturing at the Willamette Valley Chautauqua at Gladstone was telephoned to, and declared that he could resuscitate the lad if the body was recovered before it had been in the water longer than four hours. He prepared to come to the city, but it was not until about five hours after the accident that Mr. Lutz, who had improvised a grappling hook from a long gas pipe, recovered the body.

Meanwhile E. C. Dye, W. F. Schooley and Waldo Caulfield had raised a purse of about $19 with which to employ a Portland diver. They had telephoned for a diver but had been unable to obtain one. The money was given to Mr. Lutz, who gave it to Mr. Burd. Mr. Lutz, who was complimented upon his recovery of the body, worked with it for more than half an hour in an effort to restore life.

Mrs. Burd was prostrated over the tragedy, and her condition is serious. The family has lived in the city only a few months, and the father is employed in the machine shop of a local paper mill.

Coroner Wilson decided that death was accidental and did not hold an inquest. The body was taken to the Holman undertaking establishment and the funeral probably will be held today.

While the search for the body was being made business virtually was suspended and hundreds thronged the shores watching the searches.

Mr. Lutz Has Premonition.

Mr. Lutz, when seen last night by a Morning Enterprise reporter, was loath to talk about his recovery of the body, but finally explained how it had been accomplished. He, with several others, had dragged the bottom of the river, but owing to the stumps and other debris accomplished nothing. Finally Mr. Lutz decided that the only way to find the body was to get a heavy pole that the buoyancy of the water would not divert.

"I had a premonition that I would find the body," said Mr. Lutz, "and, find the body," said Mr. Lutz, "and, as possible if there was any chance to save the lad's life, I went back to the store and got a long steel pipe. To the end of this I fastened several hooks, and then hurried back to the river and got a man to row me out to where the boy sank. I prodded the bottom for some time with the pole, and pulled up several stumps, a gunny sack and other debris. Finally one of the hooks caught under the boy's arm and we drew him into the boat. I tried for fully half an hour to resuscitate him, and at one time thought I might be successful. His legs and arms were stiff, but these I soon limbered and I am sure for a little while he breathed faintly. However, it was soon seen that the boy had been in the water too long."

When tendered the money that had been raised for the employment of the diver, Mr. Lutz said that he did not want it, and that he considered it his duty to assist in recovering the body. Upon second thought he accepted the money and at once handed it over to Mr. Burd, who will use it in defraying the funeral expenses of his son.

The Elements of Character.

Greatness of character is a communicable attribute. It has nothing exclusive in its nature. It cannot be the monopoly of an individual, for it is the enlarged and generous action of faculties and affections which enter into and constitute all minds—I mean reason, conscience and love—so that its elements exist in all.—William Ellery Channing.

A GERMAN WOMAN'S PRAISE.

She Says American Women Dress Better Than Parisians.

"American women dress better than the women in any country in Europe, even in Paris," says Miss Helen Hassa, a German author now traveling in America.

"In Europe only the wealthy classes dress well, but in America all women do. Clerks who make only $3 or $4 a week dress in perfect good taste. With a one dollar shirt waist and a one dollar skirt they have the style of queens, a style that European women do not get by spending many times that much. They dress their hair beautifully and take good care of their complexions. The latter—although sometimes more art than nature—are very good. As an average the American women are pretty.

"Here in America it is unusual to see a badly dressed woman, while in Germany it is unusual to see one who is well dressed.

"I am a great admirer of the middle class American woman. She is intelligent, always looks the lady, makes her own clothes, does her housework and is a splendid housekeeper. The German woman of the same class never looks well dressed, is always in dressing sacks, dirty and scrubbing. One seldom sees the American woman scrub, yet her house is always clean.

"The Paris woman possibly has the better of her American sister on hats and gowns, but the American woman looks better. Only the high society of France can afford these expensive gowns. The average American woman can make herself a beautiful and stylish gown for little money; consequently the 'laurels' belong to her."

Renovating a Broom.

When, after much service, a broom becomes shorter on one side than the other and the ends of the straws as sharp as needles, dip it in hot water and trim it down quite evenly with the shears. The result will be a broom as serviceable as when new.
