THE WORST KIND OF WASTE.

One's idea of waste or extravagance is usually financial and the results upon the individual spender, according to whether he lives within or beyond his income, has never been more graphically described than in the words of the celebrated Micawber, "Income, twenty pounds; expenditure, nineteen pounds, nineteen shillings and sixpence. Result, happiness. Income, twenty pounds; expenditure, twenty pounds and sixpence. Result, misery."

And yet financial waste, great as it is, is not the worst. A man may get to the end of his money and then financial waste necessarily stops. But the greatest waste is that of energy, strength, time and the finer sensibilities, ending at last in moral disaster.

That extravagance in money and extravagance along the other lines mentioned too often go together there are abundant proofs in this present time of great incomes and fortunes. One trouble is that a very large number of wasteful, useless young men are cursed with rich parents. If they were otherwise their lives would be more account.

Year-Round Exposition.

While San Francisco will be content to keep its exposition open for six months, San Diego will keep its open the full year of 1915. After all when the climate is so well adapted to that purpose, why shouldn't San Diego make the most of its show?

Home prosperity depends upon home industry, and state wide prosperity, will be greater if factories selling "Made in Oregon" goods are patronized by the local merchants.

The mail order houses of the East would not be so prosperous if the people of this community would insist on having "Made in Oregon" goods from the local merchants. The business of this community would be better conserved if the buying public and the merchants would help along the "Made in Oregon" idea.

Pleasant For Shaw.

Ford Madox Hueffer, in his "Memories and Impressions," says that on his first coming to London Bernard Shaw wrote a pamphlet called "Why I Am an Anarchist," which was published at the Torch press. "Some time later," relates Mr. Hueffer, "when Mr. Shaw, having advanced a stage further toward his intellectual salvation, was addressing in the park a Socialist gathering on the tiresome text, 'The Foolishness of Anarchism,' the young proprietors of the Torch walked round and round in the outskirts of the crowd offering copies of Mr. Shaw's earlier pamphlet for sale and exclaiming at the top of their voices, 'Why I Am an Anarchist! By the Lecture!'"

The English Barber.

I grumble because it is impossible to get a comfortable hair cut or shave in Manchester and because the majority of barbers there are uncivilized, says a writer in M. A. P. London. A visit even to the best barbers' shops at present means an hour of misery.

The barber's breathing on my neck no longer annoys me; I have got used to it. But I was quite surprised when last week the man who was attending to me abstracted pieces of cake from his pocket every now and again and let his crumbs fall down my back. I am waiting for some enterprising hair cutter to open a few decent shops where the assistants are at least clean and where they are under some sort of discipline.

Persevering.
