The ease with which big defrauders of the government (which means big defrauders of the public) manage to escape prison or settle on thirty cents on the dollar, is in striking contrast with the equal ease with which small offenders are sent to prison.

It is well to have confidence in others even though occasionally that confidence may be misplaced. This is far better than being suspicious of every person we meet and of every proposition made.

Too often people take for granted in the home life and without any appreciation for the same, many things which if shown them in the homes of other people would call forth profuse acknowledgments and gratitude.

Women Must Beware of Love of Luxury

Labor Saving Devices Have Caused Destructive Tendency

By Princess HENRIETTE of Belgium, Sister of King Albert

THE GREATEST DANGER TO THE AVERAGE WOMAN OF TODAY LIES IN HER GROWING LOVE OF LUXURY. THIS MAY BE A RESULT OF THE CONDITION OF THE TIMES.

Following labor saving and other inventions and various devices which make life easier, in a sense, than was formerly the case, this condition seems to be constantly increasing.

Until a comparatively few years ago hard work by women, even in civilized countries, was a NECESSITY. It was FORCED on them, whether they liked it or not.

In France, for instance, the women are famed for their industry and application, but as the world progresses conditions in this respect, as in many others, have changed.

Do not let my meaning be misunderstood. I do not wish to convey the impression that I believe France will follow in the footsteps of the early Roman empire to the extent that decay of the people will result from this growth of a love of luxury and ease.

Such an assumption would be unreasonable and absurd. Still, nevertheless, TO BE FOREWARNED IS TO BE FOREARMED. All nations should guard against even a LITTLE INFLUENCE in that direction.

A TRIFLE GOSSIPY

R. L. Holman has received an interesting letter from his daughter, Norma B. Holman, who has been visiting relatives in Los Angeles since February.

There were four of us in our party: Edna Irene, Marguerite Austin and myself. Marguerite lives near here and is a great friend of Irene's.

There is also a 'sea cucumber' which is the lowest form of animal life found in the sea.

There is also a sea slug which grows on the rocks. It is really a plant and has what appear to be quills sticking out all around.

Well, Papa, I have written so much that I am getting tired, but I have oceans more to tell.

Easy Stars. The very acme of ease is reached in stairs that have treads twelve to fifteen inches broad and risers five to seven inches high.

Heart to Heart Talks. By EDWIN A. NYE.

MESSAGE OF THE ROSE. I read a story the other day by Ethyl Huxton. I have neither space nor eloquence to tell it as she told it, but a broad shouldered, big hearted, contemplative husband, and little Scotch Maggie, "a bonny sweet thing," his wife.

After some happy years of marriage Maggie died. John was quieter after that than before and much given to dreaming. And soon—very soon—a long grave was made beside the shorter one.

Some time after the death of husband and wife among Maggie's treasures was found a little envelope containing a dried rose and a scrap of paper on which was written:

"We had a small tiff this morning, and dear John went out of the house. And presently he came in again and gave me this rose—and I cried."

Just a rose—and she cried! Big, silent John said nothing, but Maggie's warm heart responded instantly, and she cried from tenderness and joy.

And the memory of the rose and its message was wholly sweet to the end of her days.

Why should it be so hard for us to do the gracious thing in season? And the tears we waste and the years we waste and the cruel wounds we bear all because we are not large enough, not wise enough, to listen to the voice of wisdom, because we are too proud or too vain or too blind to pluck the simple rose to heal the hurt!

Just a rose—now dust. But John was forgiving enough and humble enough to heed the small voice of pleading love.

Doubtless "the little tiff" was a turning point in the wedded life of these. Often it is the trivial things over which husband and wife disagree. And these little matters grow and grow. They lead to coldness and resentment and sometimes to the parting of the ways.

How quickly does the heart of every Maggie respond to the rose that John silently extends!

What argument can never do the logic of the proffered flower will accomplish. It is the message of forgiving love stooping that it may conquer, and the heart of woman makes instant answer.

That rose is dust. The long grass grows on the graves of John and Mary, but this to us who live and love is the teaching: Love much. Be very kind.

The Cold Shoulder. Miss Bronson, a very charming young woman of Oak Lane, is being visited by an English cousin, who is charming enough, but not especially brilliant.

"I don't believe in giving the cold shoulder to any one," announced a Philadelphia girl, with stompahs. "Oh, my dear," interrupted the fair English maid, "the cold shoulder, properly garnished, is a very good. I am very fond of it."—Philadelphia Times.

Thackeray in France. France might reckon Thackeray, along with Edward, the king of sunny memories, as the most Parisian of Britons, for truly did Timmarsh know and love the life of the boulevards, ebbing and flowing between the Bastille and the Bois, the cafes and the theaters, himself most aptly described by his own lines:

"He was free, his means was easy A finer, nobler gent than he Never drove around the Rhone Elisee Nor paced the Rue de Rivoli."—Henry Watterson in Courier-Journal.

A Bald Court Fool. Ferdinand II. was a man of very uncertain moods and would allow his jester to take liberties with him one hour while resenting any familiarity the next. One day he turned round on Jonas, his favorite fool, and thundered: "Fellow, be silent. I never stoop to talk to a fool!"

"Never mind that," answered Jonas. "I do. So please listen to me in your turn."

A Slave to Style. "Your little friend has the ribbon of honor again this week, while you get 'win it!"

"Why, mamma, Suzanne is blond and blue is becoming to her, but I am a brunette and can't wear it."—pau Mele.
