CONSIDER well before you buy vegetables. Think for a moment of how they are bought and kept. Vegetables should be fresh and moist with the appearance of having just come from where nature grew them. That is, when they are well kept—the way we keep them.

This is the reason why all our vegetables look as if they had just arrived—with all that delicious, fresh, natural flavor you like so well. And we take good care that not a moment is lost in their delivery to you. Send a trial order.

Captain Hidy said, after the drill Saturday night, that the company would have to obtain a new armory. The lower floor, which was formerly occupied by a flour mill company, has been leased for use as a garage. There is a rule in insurance companies not to insure buildings used as garages, and the company would be denied insurance on its equipment if it continued using the same building. The Oregon City Naval Division, which is being organized, will use the same armory as company G.

BIG FLOW OF GAS OBTAINED AT STONE

A large flow of gas was obtained Friday night at the Home Oil & Gas Company's well at Stone. There is a continuous flow of gas from the bottom of the well, which is 1,400 feet deep. The gas comes through the water, and bailing has been started. The men employed at the oil well and the stockholders are greatly encouraged, and the work will be pushed at a rapid rate.

This is the third time that gas has been encountered in this well, but the last "strike" was much stronger than the former two. At the time previous to this when gas was discovered the casing of the well gave way, and some time was lost in making repairs. As the repairs are made it is believed that oil in paying quantities will soon be discovered.

Women Duellists.

A celebrated duel took place in 1808 between Countess de Polignac and Mme. de Noale.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE

OPENED HIS EYES.

In Marlon, O., the other day Bernard Norton began an action for divorce.

His wife was in England.

What cause he may have had, if any, for the application to the courts is not revealed.

He was poverty stricken; that is all we know. And it may be that the wolves of want had clamored about his elbow until he had argued with his soul whether it cared any longer to "fardels" her.

Anyway— Before the case came on for trial two things happened which changed Mr. Norton's point of view:

A relative died and left him some money that was available, and at the same time he received bad news from his wife in England.

She had become blind.

It was then that a great revulsion of feeling concerning his wife came to him. No doubt he remembered many acts of love and sacrifice on the part of the wife which now that she was helpless and blind pleaded strongly for her.

He did this: Ordering the divorce stricken from the docket, he took his inheritance and started at once to rescue the poor blind wife across the sea.

Pity opened his eyes.

He now could see that he himself had been blind—blind to the real things of his life.

And we—all of us? Most of us are blind in the same unseeing way. Always do we take and fall to give.

Blind! Blind! Blind! Blind to the toll and tenderness, blind to the service and sacrifice of those who love and serve us.

So many tender words and true. We meant to say, dear love, in you; So many things we meant to do. But we forgot.

Bernard Norton forgot to say and do the things he meant to do and say, and the shock of a great pity opened his eyes.

And so must tenderness and gratitude open our blinded eyes.

Lift the fainting head with a ringing word of cheer ere the dear head be fallen low and the ear is deaf to hear and the eyes forever sealed.

The Knots Couldn't Hold It.

It is related of the Rev. John Eltor, commonly called "the apostle of the Indians" in the seventeenth century, that he would give to the red men as much of his annual salary of $50 as soon as he received it. On one occasion the parish treasurer put the money into a handkerchief and tied it into as many hard knots as possible, to prevent the great preacher from giving it away before he reached home. Calling soon after on a family suffering from illness and want, the famous dominie told them that God had sent them relief, and began to untie the handkerchief, but becoming impatient he handed it to the mother, saying: "Take it, my dear. I believe the Lord designed it all for you."
