CABBAGE LEAVES IN HAT.
Enables Umpire Mal Eason to Keep Cool.

Umpire Malachi Eason is strong for the old fashioned stunt of keeping his head cool with a bunch of cabbage leaves. Before going on the field recently he stuck a bunch of cabbage leaves under his cap. After the game he said it was the only sure way to keep from getting overheated.

According to Eason, cabbage leaves will retain moisture better than a damp rag or sponge and keep the head cool.

"Some years ago while I was pitching for the Brooklyn club I twirled a game in St. Louis on the hottest day I ever experienced in my life," said Eason. "I kept my head cool that day by sticking a bunch of cabbage leaves under my cap. Several of our men were overheated that day. I pitched the entire game and saw the other fellows drop by the wayside. Pitching nine innings of ball with the temperature hovering around 94 is anything but a picnic. I can't imagine anything harder unless it is umpiring the game."

Scotch Members of Parliament
Wear Costume Like Comic Opera

AMERICANS usually regard the Scotch highland costume as fit only for a masquerade ball or the comic opera stage. The costume is never seen here except under such circumstances or at a Scotch picnic. The man prone to play the bagpipes will usually don kilt, tartan, sash and the other articles that form the picturesque highland garb as a preliminary to starting his droning and wheezing. But over in England it is different. The patriotic Scotchman there wears the bizarre outfit on all state occasions. The picture above shows Scotch members of parliament in a London street, where they attract no more attention than any other persons, their bare knees being accepted as a matter of course.

FEAR OF COBB HELPS TEAM.
Opponents Become Nervous When He Gets Into Action.

Take Ty Cobb from the Detroit team and it would have a hard time finishing in the first division, and this is not reflecting in the least on the other members of that very good ball team. But where in the history of baseball has there ever been a ball player to compare with Cobb? There have been others to show flashes, others who were brilliant in spots, but Cobb is the only one who is sensational every day, and does more to win ball games for his team than any three other individuals on it. You may despise him because he is always making the other fellows look foolish; you may charge him with being inflated over his success or what not, but you can't get round the fact that his equal on the ball field has never been seen.

There have been other ball players, and there are some today, but compare them, day in and day out, with Cobb, and they are not in the same class. What is most remarkable about the lad from Georgia is his untiring aggressiveness. There is never an idle

NAVAL RULE BROKEN TO HONOR SEA HERO

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—Naval regulations of the strictest character were put aside today when Admiral Togo, as the nation's guest, was taken through Washington navy yard and allowed to make a complete inspection. A rule rigidly adhered to prohibits army or navy officers of a foreign nation from even entering a United States navy yard. Admiral Togo's visit fractured the rule. It was a personal compliment to Japan's great sea-fighter.

During the inspection the admiral asked many questions and was much interested in everything he saw. He paid particular attention to the naval gun factory.

Following lunch with Assistant Secretary of State Huntington Wilson, Admiral Togo took an automobile ride around the city and visited Congress.

HENDERSON HOLDS OAKLAND SCORELESS

PORTLAND, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—Benny Henderson of Peckinpaugh proved the undoing of the Oaks in the opening game of the Beavers' return to the home park today, and the lone run scored through Chester Chadbourne's daring base-running in the first inning brought home the honors to Portland, 1 to 0.

Wolverton trotted out his best bet in the pitching line, Harry Ables, and the big southpaw pitched a fine game, but he had bad luck in passing Chadbourne as first man up for Portland. That worthy stole third in the most daring fashion after Sheehan had advanced him on a sacrifice, and Barry had fled out to Zacher.

Then "Roaring Bill" Rappa kissed one for a ripping single past Wolverton and Chadbourne tallied the only run of an exciting afternoon of baseball.

TY COBB, DETROIT'S WONDERFUL OUT-FIELDER.

moment in a ball game for Cobb. He does not stop to rest on his laurels nor slow down because a game is won or lost, but he is always in the game from head to foot.

Cobb is supposed to be playing in the highest class of baseball, and yet it is but seldom that he does not show his superiority over his opponents. And they realize his prowess, too, for no sooner is he on the bases than the opposition is on a mission. He no sooner faces a pitcher's "what worthy concludes that he is a master at the art. Cobb helps his ball team as much by the fear that he creates among the opposing team as he does by his actual sensational performance.

Epilepsy Victim Aided.

Isaac Hennessy, a stranger in this city, on Sunday had an epileptic fit at Twelfth and Main streets. The man evidently felt the fit coming on, and, calling for help, ran to the river, where he bathed his head. He fell on the sand. Edward Busch, who was on the veranda at the rear of the Busch hall, ran to Hennessy's assistance. Todd Binford and others also assisted in relieving him.

THE WHEEL OF FORTUNE.

Luck?

There is no such thing.

That is to say, in this well ordered universe what is known as luck is merely an accident. And even as to accidents the rule holds good that—Nothing happens without cause.

To rely upon chance or luck is to rely upon something that may never happen.

Events in this world are governed by the inflexible rule of fixed laws. There is no fate.

The primitive man believed in a power he could feel, but whose laws he could not understand. Exhibition of this power he traced to self-willed notions of some erratic divinity.

Therefore superstition, and oracles by the ancients and, by the same token, the patronage of palmists and fortune tellers by the moderns.

If you merely hope for "something to turn up" you are indulging in the vagaries of dreamland. If you rest on the hazard of mere chance you risk ruin.

Facts rule events.

If you fall do not rail at your luck. Blame yourself.

If you, the captain on the deck of Destiny, run your vessel on the rocks, either it is the fault of your charts or your lack of seamanship.

If you go adrift and without a knowledge of navigation your bark must become a derelict.

Belief in luck ruins men.

Belief in God, in self, in just and righteous laws, makes men.

If you persist in depending upon "signs" and peril your future on the jeopardy of speculation what may you expect?

And note this:

The man who risks his fortune on the turn of a wheel can have no reverent or trusting mind and no proper self respect, because he believes only in "luck," and the god of luck will betray him.

He is ignorant.

The wise man believes in natural causes and effects, natural laws and penalties.

Satisfied Her Curiosity.

A girl, recently riding in a street car, was annoyed and made curious. Seated opposite her was a man afflicted with crossed eyes. The girl was pretty and knew it. She knew, too—or thought she knew—that all men on the car were looking at her. That is what annoyed her. She was in doubt as to whether the crossed-eyed man's gaze was curious. He may have been reading the advertisements over her head. He may have been looking at the conductor on the rear platform. To satisfy her curiosity the girl yawned. The act is as contagious as the measles. She found out the man was looking at her, for he yawned, too.—New York Tribune.

FRED CLARKE READ HIS OWN OBITUARY.

Manager Fred Clarke of the Pittsburg Pirates had the unique distinction of reading his own obituary. Some overzealous press agent sent out the story by wire from Pittsburg, and a Cleveland paper got out an extra on the sad announcement stating that as a result of being hit on the head by a pitched ball he had died.

last Thursday had opened the eyes of the residents of the county to the benefit to be derived from the capital highway, and urged that construction work be started at once.

The meeting probably was the most enthusiastic held in Oregon City in recent years, and that the residents of this county will furnish all the money necessary for building the road and give other aid is assured. The meeting was called originally to devise means of obtaining the thoroughfare on this side of the river. However, it was decided at the Salem meeting to have a loop thoroughfare it was considered advisable to hold the meeting and arrange plans for the beginning of the work at the earliest possible time. That land values will enhance as a result of the plan to build the boulevard is the belief of the residents of this city, and a real estate boom along the proposed routes is expected.
