

DRESS DEVELOPMENTS.

Poke Bonnets Becoming For Young and Pretty Faces.
 Hand tucked blouses of sheer linen with jabots trimmed with Valenciennes lace are much worn.
 Cross stitch borders are effective on pique and are the latest craze among needlewomen.
 White and colored cord embroideries appear on frocks of pique and linen, and some of the skirts are cut in battements and edged with cord.
 The odd little poke bonnet in rough straw is popular for the young and pretty face. Usually the simplest of trimming awaits for this coquettish headpiece, possibly a small bunch of flowers over each ear or a daintily saucy bow at the back.
 One of the millinery oddities observed in connection with a recently imported model was the combination of white velvet grapes with giant white wheat in the form of a spiky spray.

 This nightgown of fine nainsook can be made entirely of one material, or the yoke may be of embroidery. In this case the edges of the yoke and sleeves were trimmed with embroidered scallops. JUDIC CHOLLET.

MILADY'S FADS.

Black Satin Bows For White Buckskin Slippers.
 The sleeves of nearly all of the bathing suits are made elbow length.
 White buckskin pumps and slippers have crisp little bows of black satin.
 In evening and afternoon wraps three-quarter sleeves are much in favor.
 On blouses the sailor collar and cuffs are of contrasting material and color. There is the ever popular foulard-dotted, striped and plain—that is combined with linen, batiste and silk.
 As a change from the tailor jacket there are delicious little coats of supple taffeta, with gathered basques hardly reaching to the hips, piped with white, black or pale tints. They are fastened in front and have short, fussy little sleeves. They are in all colors to harmonize or contrast with the dress or hat.

 This child's undergarment of batiste has a straight gathered petticoat joined to a smoothly fitting underwaist. The skirt is trimmed with tucks and an embroidered flounce. JUDIC CHOLLET.

This May Manton pattern is cut in sizes for a child of two, four or six years of age. Send 10 cents to this office, giving number, 7079, and it will be promptly forwarded to you by mail. If in haste send an additional two cent stamp for letter postage, which insures more prompt delivery.

Gilbert and Punch.

When the late W. S. Gilbert wrote "The Yarn of the Nancy Bell" he sent it to London Punch, but the editor returned it as being too bloodthirsty, for it will be remembered that "the elderly naval man" had practically eaten all of the Nancy's crew except himself, whereupon Gilbert sent the ballad to Fun, which accepted it with delight. Gilbert never forgave the insult he considered he had received from the editor of Punch and consistently refused to contribute to its pages up to the time of his death.
