J. LEVITT

Suspension Bridge Cor. Oregon City

Kicked Out.
"Don't you like Marie's father?"
"I don't."
"Why?"
"He's too demonstrative."
"How is that?"
"He puts his best foot forward too violently."

Small Dogs Retain Popularity With Society Women as Pets

Photos by American Press Association.

MANY residents of cities have recently been conducting a crusade against dogs on the ground that they are a menace to health because they are subject to hydrophobia. The claim is made that they are likely to develop rabies at any time and that it cannot be known that they are dangerous until too late to prevent the damage they do by biting. Women who own and love dogs poochpooh this theory and insist that their pets are not only harmless, but are just the dearest little dears that ever lived. One of the pictures above shows Mrs. E. S. Allard of Philadelphia with her two Pomeranians, Prince Orson and Dainty Nigger, and the other picture shows Miss Kathryn Levy of Long Branch, N. J., and her Japanese spaniel Togo. The pictures were made at a recent dog show at Long Branch.

Commercial Club Chat

Among the recent visitors at the Promotion Office were Mr. and Mrs. E. I. Teemster, of Visalia, Cal. They said that they were very well pleased with Oregon until they reached the Willamette Valley, and that they like the section around Oregon City very much.

The best display of peaches at the Promotion Office were brought in this week from the farm of Charles M. Oglesby on the Abernathy Creek.

Wing, the Greenpoint gardener, has a display of turnips and tomatoes. Wing grows fine large tomatoes and was the first to sell a crate of ripe tomatoes in Oregon City this year.

Mrs. J. C. Parker, who lives on Fourteenth street, has two large sunflowers at the Promotion Office. They are twelve feet in height and several inches in diameter at the base. Some of the sunflowers will be taken to the State Fair and displayed in the Clackamas County exhibit.

The largest peach received at the Promotion Office was grown by William Jettke, whose place is on the Clackamas River. Mr. Jettke says that he has not as large a crop of peaches this year as usual, but the peaches are very large.

J. F. Hodge, of this city, grows chrysanthemum sunflowers with which to ornament his yard and finds them very satisfactory. Some of the flowers are on display at the Promotion Office.

Charles Hobbie, of Bolton, has on display Duchess of Oldenburg apples which are very large and attractive.

C. W. Swallow, of Maple Lane, has a fine display of apples at the Promotion Office. Mr. Swallow is one of the veteran fruit growers, and has always taken an interest in all exhibits of the county.
