TAFT IS CAREFUL.

President Taft has a vigorous and trenchant style of expression which he uses freely in public addresses and in public documents, as, for instance, in messages to Congress and in his veto messages. In fact, the President indites his views with such force that he becomes at times vehement, and the proofs which the Public Printer sends him generally have to be revised, toned down, and expurgated to suit the mature thought of the President and his advisers, for all of his public utterances are usually gone over at Cabinet meetings before they are given out to the world.

It was made known, a few weeks ago, that the President was writing two veto messages on a train in anticipation of action by Congress on tariff bills. Both of these vetoes were afterward "toned down" by the President, who found that in his haste to put his thoughts into words he had not exercised the care necessary to express himself with the accuracy and elegance he desired. As these documents will probably figure in campaign arguments by orators on both sides of the next great political battle, it was felt that too much care could not be given to the manner in which they were worded.

A THREATENED VACANCY.

It now appears that this mint julep season is not to bring us the authoritative word as to how that nectar of the gods shall be made. Two of the men chosen as arbiters have passed under clouds, or clouds have passed over them, since they were chosen to seats in that high tribunal, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Dr. Wiley is being investigated and Col. Watters, after losing the fight he made in Kentucky for a saloon in every town, has seen the loss of all our liberties under a reign of summary law which will soon make it inconvenient for a man to know how a mint julep is made and maddening to know how one tastes.

We have hopes of the future service of Dr. Wiley, and also that of Ollie James, who, even if defeated for the Senate in the coming Kentucky election, will still find joy in life to make him struggle not to forget how a mint julep ought to be made touch the cockles of either a glad or a sad heart. If he should win, the mint julep will be indispensable to him and his joyous friends, for there is no other drink which lends itself so finely to the celebration of a victory and blends itself so fully with a spirit of enterprise.

On the other hand no other drink lends itself so much to the solace in a solitude which a defeated candidate usually seeks, and in which he prepares it for himself. In either event Ollie James will not forget his julep recipe. But we despair of Col. Watters. We believe that already he has fore sworn the julep, and all of the other drinks which once were wont to illuminate, through him, every phase of our politics. There is no longer the flash of lightning at Louisville which once marked its sky at night as that pillar of cloud which once guided a thirsty people across a dry land to one flowing in fluid sweetness. It is time to find a third man for the tribunal. And if he who called for the Manhattan cocktail at the Fairbanks home in Indianapolis, can now be found, anywhere between Oyster Bay and Outlook, he is the man for the job.

Mr. Edison says there will be no more great wars in Europe as the world conscience is against it. Mr. Edison is the master spirit of the scientific laboratory, but, in talking of conscience, there are others.

Some Arctic explorers claim to have discovered a new race of people, not Eskimos, up near the farthest circle. But since the rise and fall of Dr. Cook North Pole stories are at a discount. They will be believed when proved.

A number of fake colleges, which subsist through the selling of fake degrees, are under fire of the National Educational Association. Something must be done if U. S. L. D. is not to become as common as a cologne.

Ill luck has attended the sham battles and other movements in the military camp at Nevada this year. It is an era of arbitration treaties, bipartisanship and reciprocity pacts, and even sham battles are out of touch with the piping times of peace.

Grand Duke Alexis Will Some Day Rule Over Two Hundred Million

GRAND DUKE ALEXIS is a fortunate boy or he is doubly unfortunate, according to the way you look at it. He is fortunate in being the adored son of the czar of Russia—doubly adored because four sisters preceded him as members of the czar's family, and it began to look as if no heir to the throne was to be born. Consequently the boy brought by the stork Aug. 12, 1904, got a welcome that was more than cordial. When he ascends the throne the country over which he will rule will probably have a population of more than 200,000,000. The unfortunate part of the boy's life lies in the fact that the ruler of Russia does not lie in a bed of roses. Some of that country's czars have been assassinated, and the occupant of the throne lives in constant dread of the assassin's bullet or bomb. No matter what his ability or his intentions, there will be troubles for the little czar-which when he drops the last two syllables of his title. Just now he is not worrying about the future, but is enjoying the present. The picture above was made by his doting father, who is an enthusiastic and expert amateur photographer.

BEAVERS BLANKED IN PITCHERS' BATTLE

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 6.—(Special.)—Fitzgerald had everything today and the Beavers were at his mercy. He allowed only 2 hits and Portland did not score. Koestner pitched good ball, only 6 hits and one score being made by the home team. Both teams played perfectly in the field, and the game was one of the finest here this season.

SUGAR ADVANCES 25 CENTS HUNDRED

The boom in the sugar market continues. In the East the refiners raised quotations 20 to 25 cents a hundred, and the lift there was followed by an advance of 25 cents a hundred on all grades of the refined product in the wholesale market in Portland. The latest lift puts dry granulated and fruit and berry sugar up to $7.10 a hundred, the highest price at which the product has sold in the Portland market in many years, and the jobbers say there is nothing in sight to indicate that the end of the upward movement has come.

The remarkable advance in sugar values since the middle of June is for the most part attributed to the unprecedented growth this summer in most of the European sugar beet producing countries. In some of the best growing districts on the other side it is said that the crop this year will be little if at all more than half the average output of recent years, and in all sections of Europe where beets are grown for sugar is a commercial way the yield has been cut down in a serious way by the extremely dry weather of the past three months.

The More You Eat the Thinner You Get

By Dr. ELMER LEE, Editor of Health Culture

PEOPLE grow fat through a combination of indigestion and nonassimilation. They begin by eating the wrong sort of food or too much. The digestive tract cannot perform the work laid upon it. The undigested food isn't assimilated, worked over into blood and muscle. Unassimilated organisms are deposited in various parts of the body wherever there is a vacant space to receive them. They collect, and so does surplus flesh, soft, flabby and unmuscular, even though it may not be directly unhealthy. This is fat and, like any other animal fat, can be directly dissolved only by extreme heat.

The person who wishes to get thin or to keep thin should AVOID ALL ANIMAL FOODS. They are not clean, are seldom perfectly fresh and are actually not as well adapted as vegetable substances for assimilation of nourishment by the body. It is this last reason that makes these foods PARTICULARLY INJURIOUS. There is a great deal of actual fat in all animal substances.

The fat person, therefore, should stick to vegetable foods, the delicate organisms of which are easily broken up and assimilated by the system. But he should not STINT HIMSELF. He should eat more rather than less than he has been eating. I THINK SIX MEALS A DAY IS NONE TOO MANY.
