AMERICAN MARKET IN GREECE.

American Minister Moses writes from Athens to the Daily Consular and Trade Reports of a new amendment to the Greek tariff law in virtue of which glucose may be admitted into Greece free of duty when intended for manufacture into sweets for export.

The minister points out that this legislation will greatly facilitate the operation of a recently drawn contract by which a well known Greek firm is to manufacture currant jelly in Greece on an extensive scale for export to the United States, utilizing as an important ingredient American glucose furnished by a New York firm. The arrangement extends to 1925 and looks to the establishment of a number of currant jelly plants in Greece. Twelve thousand tons of glucose are to be used in the first year, the amounts to increase in the future as the development of the business warrants.

This will open a market in Greece for an important American corn product, and will at the same time promote the sale of glasses, jars, containers, labels, etc., all of which it is proposed to obtain in this country.

Conservation Congress Will Teach Farmers Their Business

MAYBE the farmer knows his business, and maybe he doesn't. At any rate, he is to be given a lesson, a sort of instruction by mail, as it were. The farm and the farmer are to be the subjects of especial attention at the third national conservation congress to be held at Kansas City, Sept. 25-27, and the addresses to be delivered are to be published in the form of a national handbook for farmers. Some forty governors of states are expected to attend, and a dozen speakers of national wide prominence are scheduled to address the congress. Among these will be President Taft, Secretary of the Interior Walter L. Fisher, ex-Secretary of the Interior James R. Garfield, ex-Chief Forester Gifford Pinchot, Governor Herbert S. Hadley, Senator Joseph L. Bristow, Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, Governor Walter Roscoe Stubbs and Dr. Harvey W. Wiley. The national conservation congress is held under the direction of the National Conservation Association, which has a membership of 50,000. The Kansas City convention hall, where the sessions of the congress will be held, seats 15,000. The national Democratic convention of 1900 was held there. It is owned by the people of Kansas City, having been built by popular subscription at a cost of $500,000.

BASEBALL STARS WHO STILL STICK

Diamond Shining Lights of 1910 Twinkle Brighter Than Ever.

MCGRAW FOOLS WISE ONES.

Showing of Rube Marquard This Season Surprised Many Experts—Many New World Beaters Make Good, but Fail to Umpir Many Vets.

With the end of the major league season in sight, this seems as good a time as any to review some of the points which will make 1911 history in the annals of the game. It really is but only an annual. We do this to beat some of the real baseball historians like George Fullerton to it. Now for the fatal plunge: Ty Cobb of Detroit further strengthened his hold on the honor of being the world's greatest ball player. Charles Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, called him this in a famous interview last year. Nothing the Georgia Cracker has done so far can take this remarkable title from him. He has been largely responsible in keeping the Tigers in their high estate. In batting, base running and fielding he has been premier in all that that much overworked word indicates.

After having been panned by New York critics for two years and more McGraw of the Giants now has the satisfaction of seeing his $11,000 beauty, Rube Marquard, develop into one of the best southpaws in the country. Getting off to another punk start, this former American association star has blossomed out into a world beater, and it is due to him in a great measure that the Giants are very, very formidable contestants for the National league title. The changeable New York critics now are extolling McGraw's foresight. So hats off to the Giants' manager, please!

Player Stovall of the Cleveland Naps has proved himself a first rate manager for "one so young." The Naps have really played better ball under him than they have in years. The players seem to want to make his regime as much of a success as possible, which accounts for the very commendable manner in which they have been playing the past two months. They have risen out of the depths to a position which is not half bad, being contestants with the White Sox, the Yankees and the Speed Boys of Boston for third notch.

Ed Walsh of the Sox has pitched his first no hit game after knocking at the door for years. This caps his truly great career, and he now can rest in content. It would have broken his heart to retire from the game without that honor. Ed has pitched several one hit games. One tough one in particular, played some four years ago in Chicago grounds against the Naps, was a cruel blow to Edward. The one hit was a mighty dinky one in the eighth inning. Then another hit that might have been knocked down occurred a couple of weeks ago against Boston. But the best game Walsh ever pitched was against Chesbro of the Yankees six years ago. That former spitball king held the Sox to one hit and lost, 1 to 0, which is going some.

Another Ed—Reubach of the Cubs—retains his unchallenged title of the wildest man of the leagues. For years the Cub fans have shuddered to see him ascend the box. As it generally happened there were half a dozen men passed, one or two hit, and then Edward was called to the bench. Most of the Chicago fans wonder why he has been kept this long time. But perhaps the Cub management feels compelled to retain one who is so consistent. And we still have the same old headlines in the papers—in fact, it happened only recently—"Reubach Wild, Cubs Lose."

The grand form shown by the St. Louis Cardinals and their amazing sport earlier in the season are one of the year's best offerings. It is possible that next year St. Louis will have a winner. The Boston Nationals, with two comebacks—Kling and Donlin—have been jarring several of the "hopes" of late. The Cubs were severely jolted on their last visit to Boston. This is noteworthy enough to deserve mention here, inasmuch as Boston generally is satisfied with one victory a year from Chicago.

Carrigan Has Collection of Gloves. Bill Carrigan, the Boston American catcher, carries a series of gloves and a valet to supply them. Some he uses with men on bases and others when the sacks are unoccupied. Cloutier's spitball influences Bill in his change of mitts.

Players Who Made Five Bingles. Players who have made five hits in one game this season are Devore, Byrne (twice), Tenney, Bescher, Simon, Bill Sweeney, Mike Mitchell, Cobb, Dan Murphy, McInnes, Barry and Ed Collins. Four of the twelve are Mackmen.

Sweeney Has Developed Into Star. Infielder Bill Sweeney of the Boston Nationals is fast getting into the class of A1 ball players of the country. He never was so much in the game as since he took to playing second base.

Making It Clearer. "Here," said the proofreader; "this doesn't read right. You say the man was looking disconsolately at the last shilling in his pocket." "That's so," replied the disaster editor. "Make it read this way: 'Was looking disconsolately through the hole in his pocket at the last shilling therein.'"—London Telegraph.

DEFENSELESS MAN By JANE PINKNEY BENNETT Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

The happiest day in my life was when Alan Constable proposed to me. I had been expecting a declaration for weeks, and perhaps this added to my delight. Alan is a steady, slow going fellow, who never does anything in a hurry.

Heart to Heart Talks. By EDWIN A. NYE.

TO THE MAN OF FIFTY. I have two friends, each fifty years of age, who have retired from business. As I myself am on the shady side of fifty, though as young in spirit as any boy, I wanted to know how these men looked upon life. One said: "I had a hard fight to make my way. No one helped me; on the contrary everybody tried to beat me. I was enough to pay all bills while I am on earth. I am under no obligations to anybody." The other said: "I tried to do some good as I went along, but failed. I am tired of the struggle. I have earned a rest. I have no grievance against any one. Let the world wag as it will." I was surprised at the bitter drop I had discovered in the bottom of these hearts.

They are wrong, both of them. They hauled down the flag too soon. They were well whipped, though not boastful. The battle of life is not about one-half over at fifty.

Both these men had lost the flush of enthusiasm and the fire edge of endeavor which should come to the veteran when the drums are sounded for a charge. They had quit the day's job while it was yet noon. And, having quenched the spirit, they had shortened their days.

Like some forest trees, they are not only at the top, but in the best of them. A man should not quit growing as long as there is in him the sap of development nor so long as he can be useful to his fellows.

Roll up your sleeves, fifty! Suppose Franklin or Edison had retired at fifty, how much the world had lost! Some of the best work done by men has been done by men between the ages of fifty and eighty.

Quit at fifty? Why, that's treason. Renew your youth like the eagle. Climb up where you catch again the visions of your boyhood. Fight on, fifty!

In the old sword battered and broken? Nevertheless fight on with the remnant of the old blade. Wait till the bugles blow the retreat! When the sun goes down on the fighting there is time enough to go into camp.

The "Sans Culottes," which means "the men without breeches," was the trousseau, and referred to the ragged condition of the Paris mob, was first used contemptuously by Maury in the national assembly to describe his opponents. As so often happens with contemptuous nicknames—"Whigs" for instance—the popular party caught up the opprobrious epithet and wore it with pride, and it came to be the general name of the extreme French Democrats throughout the revolution.

It is three months since I heard that Alan was engaged to Carrie Watson. Today I have received a note from him saying that his engagement with Carrie lasted only a week and he had only brought it about to show me how silly I was to listen to tales about him. He denies that he ever was engaged to Carrie Watson. He sent with his note the engagement ring and asked me to accept it as a friendly gift, saying that he has no fault to find with me. I was simply caught in a trap by an unscrupulous woman. He closed by saying that the incident had decided him against marriage and he had decided to stick to his club.

I thought a long while before deciding to accept the ring as a "friendly gift," but finally decided to do so. I alone was at fault. My brother, whom I have told all about the trouble, says that a man attacked by a woman is practically defenseless and when I was told that he had treated a former fiancée badly I should not have expected him to accuse her or her friend of falsehood. This is a man's view of it. I can't see any harm in one who is punished by a woman defending himself. To this my brother says that there may be no harm in it, but a thoroughbred will never do it, and if he does it won't do any good. I don't understand this, but I know that Carrie Watson has separated me from the man I love and will always love.

Justice Hard to Dispense Where Human Woe and Misery Exist

By CHARLES NAGEL, Secretary of Commerce and Labor

A MAN who daily faces the record of HUMAN WOE, of HEART-ACHE, of MISERY and sometimes of brutality to be found at Ellis island, the immigrant station of New York, rises, if he rises at all, to heights of earnest desire to ameliorate the conditions of HUMAN SUFFERING with an intensity that is unknown to those who make sweet mouthfuls of "social betterment" and kindred phrases in feeble attempts to help without perceiving the cause.

The sights we see at Ellis island and the aspects of life which that great concourse of all nations presents in the way of PATHOS, MISERY, TRAGEDY and the agony of despair Kipling could not describe. No artist can paint such a picture, and those who are safeguarded by the COMFORT AND PROTECTION OF HOME and friends can but very imperfectly realize it. WE SUFFER CRITICISM FROM TIME TO TIME IN DIRECTIONS AND TO DEGREES THAT ARE WHOLLY UNDESERVED. MY GREAT REGRET IS THAT THE CONDITIONS ARE NOT FULLY UNDERSTOOD. OUR MEN ARE OFTEN DESCRIBED AS BEING COLD HEARTED IN THE DISCHARGE OF THEIR DUTIES, BUT WE KNOW DIFFERENTLY. While no man can safely wear his heart on his sleeve, the innumerable cases where inspectors go FAR OUT OF THEIR WAY to make admission possible, to be blind to unimportant facts, to be deaf to some answers, to make up deficiencies by subscriptions and similar discretionary discharges of kindly offices—all these serve to prove beyond a shadow of a doubt that a spirit of tender heartedness pervades the service and that the dispensation of justice is well tempered with mercy.
