day morning, and is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Streib. Dr. Dolts parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Dolts, of Minneapolis, who visited in this city and in Portland in April, have decided to return to Oregon to make their home, although they have large property interests in Minnesota. They will arrive soon, and it is probable they will buy property between this city and Portland on the O. W. P. line, and build a beautiful home.

The Portland Law School, of Portland, Oregon, opens its fall term September 18. It has a very nice catalogue for this year, showing eleven members in the faculty. The president of the Law School states that there will be two to three more lecturers added during the year. This is a splendid law school for the study of law as a preparation for the bar.

Dr. Carl, J. P. Lovett and James Cary have returned from a trip to Powell River.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Smith, of Canby, were in this city on Wednesday on their way to the beach, where they will spend their honeymoon. Mr. and Mrs. Smith were married at Canby, Wednesday, and came to this city in the machine of Mr. and Mrs. Grant White. The young couple are well known in Canby. The bride, who was formerly Miss Laura Sandstrom, is the daughter of J. Sandstrom, a well known and highly respected resident of that city, and the bridegroom is one of Canby's prominent young business men, being in the confectionery business. He was born and reared near Canby, and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Smith, of Macksburg.

Woman's World

Olive Schreiner, the Novelist, Gives Radical Prediction.

OLIVE SCHREINER.

"It is quite possible that the female half of humanity may be found more fitted than are men for the bulk of human labors in the future." So says Olive Schreiner, and she pictures women as becoming the greatest financiers, judges and lawmakers. This same Olive Schreiner, who was once known only as a great but peaceful novelist, author of "The Story of an African Farm," is now marching up at the head of the women's rights procession. Her motto is, "We women take all fields of labor for our right."

In her new book, "Women and Labor," she states her demand with the hard science of a college professor. Women, she declares, must and will take over a half in all fields of labor, from digging ditches to ruling nations, or else, with this modern age of machinery, they must become mere parasites. In answering the objections likely to be urged against her theories she declares, in reply to the retort that women may be unable to carry on a full half of all labors, that, on the other hand, women may prove much more able to conduct the world than are men.

Is Olive Schreiner right? Is woman to rule the world? A Columbia college professor declares that she is not merely as regards some sort of distant future, but as regards today. He points out that today in all the large cities where there are large and important movements for the improvement of social conditions women are at once more studious and more active practically. He declares that even in law and in medical schools the women are the most earnest and practical. In small towns, he points out, it is not men but women who get away from the cracker box and village gossip to form municipal improvement and study clubs.

And in answer to the oft given objection that it is only men who have been able to rule the world Mrs. Schreiner's "Women and Labor" to the effect that the best rulers in the world have been queens—Victoria and Elizabeth and Catherine of Russia. Is there some truth in the humorous papers' frequent jests to the effect that it will soon be the men who are reduced to the dishwashing and mending while women rule the world?

Walsey's Rise.

Now that the talk is of fast going it may be mentioned that the ability to establish a speed record was responsible for the first rise of Cardinal Walsey from a humble position. It was when he was chaplain to Henry VIII, that he was sent into the low countries with a letter to the Emperor Maximilian. Leaving London by boat at 4 one afternoon, Walsey took horse at Gravesend, reached Dover next morning. Canals three hours later and was with the emperor that night. An equally rapid return brought him back to the king in little more than two days and won him his first taste of royal favor.—London Spectator.

FALL OPENING

Big Showing of the New Fall Garments

WE cannot recall the time when our announcement of the first showing of the new season's garments has given us such genuine pleasure.

In such points as correct style, high quality of workmanship, desirable models, snappy creations, perfect fit and full, complete values, we are abundantly able to please you. Fortunately for us, and for you, these garments all carry this label:

"The Palmer Garment."

For many years the reputation enjoyed by this line has not been equaled, and this reputation, secured through merit only, is guarded jealously. The garments are made in the best possible manner. Not only do the garments excel in style and fit, but they render the service so much desired.

We most cordially invite you to attend this opening exhibition of the new fall styles. And we want you to understand that the prime motive of this event is to show the goods—to have you come, inspect critically and pass your judgment. You are sure to be delighted with the beautiful showing that is ready for you.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

TO A YOUNG MAN.

I should like you to read this story. It may brace you up.

It is told by the Rev. C. B. Parkhurst, and I have condensed the tale into the 500 word limit of this talk.

The boy was born in the West Indies of mixed Indian, negro and Caucasian parentage. As a child he lived in a hut with thatched roof, whose front door was a piece of sacking. Plantain, coarse cassava bread and salt fish were the daily fare.

At school the boy often went into the woods to eat his lunch, ashamed of his scanty bit.

But—

Somehow—it seems almost a miracle—the boy got the idea that he would be a physician. He determined to go to New York city and study medicine.

Hiding as a stowaway in the hold of a vessel, he turned up at Panama, where he was jailed as a vagrant.

Which was inauspicious.

On his release from the jail he secured a job on a barge, washing clothes for his board. He transferred from the barge to a Pacific liner, which took him to San Francisco. Here he went aboard a tramp steamer, supposing it would take him to New York.

Instead, it carried him around the world and back to Panama.

He had money enough to pay his fare to Colon and there found a chance to work his passage to New York, where he arrived with 11 cents in his pocket.

Eleven cents—plus grit!

After many hardships he went to work at $3 per week, increased in a few months to $4. He attended night school, where, at the close of the term, he won a prize, which made friends for him.

Working his way, assisted by his friends, he graduated at a preparatory school and entered a medical college. He gradually won his way up from student to laboratory assistant and soon was an M. D.

Young man, do you believe you have no chance to get on in the world? You must concede you have a better chance than this boy.

You can do what he did—use the best that is in you. The persistence and self denial of the West Indian youth will lift any young man to comfort and influence.

Show yourself worthy and you will also find friends. But—

While friends may boost you, remember—you must do your own climbing.
