RETIREMENT.

Nobody need be surprised at the report that Senator Joseph W. Bailey is to step out of office at the end of his term in 1913. For several years past he has been out of harmony with his party on essential issues. He was against Bryan and the dominant element of the Democrats on free silver. On the tariff he has opposed some of the measures of his party. He is against it on the initiative, referendum and recall. All three of these questions have been of some consequence and the two last-named are still before the country, and will give trouble to the Democratic party in 1912.

A generation of Democrats have appeared upon the scene who know not Joseph, and Joseph recognizes this fact. Wild men like Williams of Mississippi are at the front in Democratic councils these days. In a controversy between the Mississippi man and the Texan a few months ago on the question of "What is a Democrat?" the Mississippiian declared that the Texan's credentials were bogus.

And he was right. If Williams and his incoming colleague Vardaman are Democrats, Bailey is not. For a short time after going to the Senate Bailey was looked upon as a sort of a leader. He held that post for a few years in the House, and there was a general opinion that he would gain it in the Senate. But the defects of temperament which prevented him from being a success as a party chieftain in the popular chamber impeded him in his newer field. Democrats of much less natural ability exerted far greater influence than he did, or than he ever could.

Nevertheless, Bailey's retirement will help to call attention to the irrepressible conflict in the Democracy which threatens to render its life rather troublesome to itself in the next few years. Speaker Clark, Chairman Underwood and the other men who are in the inner council of the party in the House say that the tariff will be at the front in the campaign of 1912. They are correct. It was at the front in the extra session, will be prominent in the session which opens in Dec. and stands a chance to be paramount in the canvass next year. The only doubt as to its paramountcy lies in the uncertainty as to whether the Democratic platform will give greater or less prominence to the initiative, referendum and recall.

Holes are already being found in the new publicity law which is supposed to compel senatorial candidates to file complete reports of their campaign expenditures. But it is hardly likely that the hole is as large as that in the needle's eye through which an animal with a too pronounced hump could not pass.

Three thousand descendants of one male pair of Webbs are holding a family reunion in Illinois. This is an old family, North and South, and older yet, it antedates the Normans in England. And its fecundity is attested in the progeny of these two Illinois Webbs brothers. The stock is a Webb-footed bird.

Madras Mosquitoes.

The late Henry Guy Carleton, the playwright, lived at Atlantic City, and when the mosquitoes were bad he would tell his Madras mosquito story.

"There are no mosquitoes," he would begin, "in Brittany, and a Breton woman, about to emigrate to Madras, was warned by a friend:

"Beware of the Madras mosquitoes. They have long suckers hanging from their heads, and they will draw the very life blood out of you."

"The Breton woman arrived in Madras duly and as she disembarked she saw three elephants drawn up near the pier.

"Ciel!" she cried. "Are these mosquitoes?"—St. Paul Dispatch

New York Police Believe They Have Chief of the Black Hand

Photos by American Press Association

NEW YORK police are congratulating themselves and the public on the fact that they have Giuseppe Costabile in custody, held without bail for trial on the charge of carrying a concealed weapon. The weapon in this case was a bomb filled with enough explosive to shatter a building. Costabile's attorney made a strong fight for his client at the preliminary hearing, arguing that the bomb was not a "weapon" within the meaning of the law. Costabile declares that he is the victim of a conspiracy and that the police placed the bomb under his coat after his arrest. The real cause for the jubilation over Costabile's arrest, however, is found in the fact that the police say he is the head of the Black Hand organization that has been a terror to Italian residents of New York for years. Thousands of dollars have been extorted from them by threats and several score buildings have been blown up when the demands for money were refused. So great is the terror inspired by the Black Hand that victims refuse to testify against its members and agents and stories told to the police are "forgotten" when the witness stand is reached. Costabile, who is a mild-looking chap, and the bomb he carried when he was arrested are shown in the picture.

Hop market is firmer with the market showing an advance of 1 1/4c a pound over first quotations.

A sale of one lot was made at Silverton at 33 1/4c a pound. The lot was purchased by Julius Wolf and included 84 bales. Several growers' holdings were in the deal, including the Warnock crop.

T. A. Lively & Company purchased the renters' portion of the Imbree lot at Hillsboro, the deal including 50 bales, at 32c, while the other portion of the crop, or about 150 bales, was purchased by J. W. Seavey Company at the same figure.

The purchase of the Hurd lot of 70 bales was reported from Harrisburg at 33c but the name of the buyer was not given.

Many inquiries are now coming forward for hops. The messages are from domestic as well as foreign buyers, but so far as known no additional orders have been received.

Oregon is the only market along the coast that any business is showing in the hop trade. At California points the market is very firm with growers holding for 35c to 40c a pound. No business is shown at Washington, because growers are still picking and are not yet ready to let go.

WOODMEN INITIATE EIGHTEEN CANDIDATES

Willamette Falls Camp 148, Woodmen of the World, initiated eighteen candidates at a meeting Friday night.

Three other candidates who were to have been initiated could not attend the meeting. Sixteen applications were received. The camp now has 444 members and it is expected that the membership will be increased to 500 by Christmas. The hall was crowded at the meeting Friday evening, and several of the members had to stand up. Clam chowder was served.

Just a Few Don'ts.

Here are a few suggestions in the way of don'ts which will be found to "wash well."

Don't put your secrets on paper. They are safest in your own custody.

Don't write anything unkind or condemnatory concerning a third person. The individual may hear of it and trouble follow.

Always say less than you mean in a letter.

Don't write affectionate letters to any man except your father or brother.

Don't write to a lover anything you wouldn't be willing the newspapers should print with your name attached. You can't tell what may happen.

Cultivate the art of writing jolly, friendly, clever letters, from which personalities are carefully eliminated.

For the Children

An Alligator's Nest in the Florida Everglades.

Contrary to the general belief, the wild alligator is still to be found in large numbers in the Everglades of Florida. Indeed, the surveying parties of the Florida East Coast railroad extension were more than once attacked by these ferocious beasts. It is seldom, however, that one discovers the nest of an alligator, but recently a naturalist photographer met with such luck, as is shown by the accompanying illustration. There were twenty-three eggs in the nest, which is not a particularly large number, considering that these creatures often lay from thirty to sixty eggs in a single nest. They are similar in shape to an ordinary duck egg and about three inches in length.

Do It Now!

Did you ever know a boy or girl who had the habit of putting off until tomorrow that which could and should be done today? This same boy or girl would be apt to say, "When I'm a man I'll show you what work is!" or "When I grow to be a woman I'll do this or that, and I'll do it well!"

Suppose this boy should say to his hands, "I'm not going to use you now; you are too small, but in some years from now, when you are grown up and strong enough, I'll put you to good use." When he grew to be a man he would find his hands quite weak from lack of proper use in his youth and useless for work.

You need not wait until you are grown men and women to do the things worth doing. Do what little you can, and do it now, and you will find your hands and feet and hands grow stronger for the things you will do later.—Philadelphia Ledger

Dolls in Siam.

Have you ever seen a Siamese girl kiss her doll? Well, you wouldn't know she was kissing it if you were not told, for she kisses it in the same fashion that grownup Siamese kiss and that is by touching their noses and drawing in a long breath. It is really funny, particularly as the dolls, except the father and mother dolls, wear no more clothes than the children themselves. The fathers and mothers wear strips of cloth wound round the middle of their bodies, as the real people do. The dolls of the poor people are made of baked mud, but children of rich people have wooden dolls, which look much more like real dolls than the little mud figures.

Leapfrog Not Popular Any More.

It is not strange that the old-fashioned game of leapfrog has lost much of its popularity with city boys. The sport has been substituted by more active games, particularly baseball, and it is seldom that boys are seen "giving a back," as they used to do in days gone by. Occasionally they will be seen leaping over their comrades by straddling their legs wide apart, but whenever there is a chance to get to a baseball ground or to play "one o' cat" leapfrog is relegated.

Enjoyment of Keeping a Diary.

No doubt many boys and girls now keep a diary. Others who do not will find a keen source of pleasure in recording the events of their daily life in this manner. A diary is really a personal history. It can be made both interesting and useful and furnishes splendid practice in writing and composition, as well as training in habits of persistency and accuracy, as a diary, if not faithfully and accurately kept, is useless.

Celebrating Birthdays.

Celebrating birthdays is one of the oldest customs in the world. How many of you know that our first record of it is in Pharaoh's time? The Pentateuch gives graphic accounts of birthday celebrations in honor of the great king.

The Great-Great-Greats.

The portraits of my great-great-greats hang on the parlor wall. And why I am afraid of them I do not know at all.

They're never cross. They're never cold. They never frown at me. They do not lift a finger when I'm naughty as can be.

And one old great he loves to smile Down on me while I play. Although his collar's high enough To choke the smile away.

I suppose the reason that I feel So creepy and so queer Must be the way they stare at me Whenever I am near.

For I can't be on the sofa Or the floor or any place That the great-great-greats' big searching eyes Aren't always on my face! —Youth's Companion.

The Happy Number.

"Company remarks" by children are famous for their innocent tactlessness and mistakes. Small Jennie's mother, for instance, had invited a large company to her home and, not having sufficient silverware, had borrowed from her sister. At table Jennie silently but palpably "counted noses," then broke out with: "It's a good thing we more people came, because for we've only just enough knives and forks to go around, with Aunt Sarah's and all."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Ten Commandments of Advertising.

At the great convention in Boston a short time ago of the National Association of Advertising men, Joseph Appel, Advertising Manager of Wanamaker's Philadelphia store, gave to the Retail Advertisers' Division these ten commandments of advertising:

Thou shalt have no other gods in advertising but truth.

Thou shalt not make any graven image of wealth, or power, or station and thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them except with honor.

Thou shalt not use the power of advertising in an unworthy cause or in behalf of unworthy goods.

Remember the working day to keep it holy.

Honor thy business and thy advertising, that they may honor thee, and thy days of usefulness be long upon the land.

Thou shalt not kill fair competition from without nor ambition from within your organization.

Thou shalt not lie, misstate, exaggerate, misrepresent nor conceal; thou shalt not bear false witness to the public, but thou shalt be fair to thy merchandise.

Thou shalt not steal by false pretenses in statements, spoken, written or printed.

Thou shalt not permit adulteration nor substitution in advertised goods.

Thou shalt not covet, nor imitate nor run down thy neighbor's business; thou shalt not covet nor run down thy neighbor's name, nor his fame, nor his wares, nor his trade, nor anything that is thy neighbor's.

American Ear For Music Is the Keenest In the World

By OTTO KAHN, New York Financier

THOUGH we have not as yet been very creative in music, I think the Americans are a DISTINCTLY MUSICAL PEOPLE in that they are genuinely FOND OF MUSIC. Proof of that is everywhere. It seems to be the art to which the soul of the American people responds most readily. I think also there is much understanding here of music and sincere response to its APPEAL, though there is not as yet in the public at large of the United States the same degree of scholarly APPRECIATION or of accurate knowledge and widespread musical culture as is found in Germany.

In some respects we ask—we even demand—HIGHER STANDARDS than the Germans do. We have set the mark which must be reached in opera, for instance, higher than the Germans have. We require a considerably higher level of individual and general excellence than other nations do.

I THINK ALSO I MAY VENTURE THE ASSERTION THAT THE AMERICAN EAR FOR MUSIC IS THE KEENEST, THE MOST SENSITIVE.
