Woman's World

Conference of W. C. T. U. to be held at Milwaukee, Oct. 27

Mrs. LILLIAN M. N. STEVENS.

The annual conference of the National Woman's Christian Temperance union will be held this year at Milwaukee on Oct. 27. Among the prominent speakers upon this occasion will be Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens, president of the W. C. T. U. Mrs. Stevens, who has been elected thirteen times president of this organization, gives practically all of her time to her official duties. Through correspondence and travel she is in constant touch with the work all over the United States. She is a woman of marked executive ability, with an attractive personality.

Housekeeping Helps For the Bride. A guest book which contains date and length of visit as well as the menus served to each guest is of service to the housekeeper, who entertains frequently, says Woman's World Magazine.

Cover the new cookbook with white oilcloth and use a small pane of glass to hold it open. This protects both inside and outside of the book, and prevents the leaves from sticking together where particles of food spatter on them.

Include a measuring cup in the kitchen equipment. Buy a first class cookbook and study it.

The bulletins which are furnished free by the United States government are a valuable aid to homemaking. Apply to your senator, representative or delegate to congress or to the secretary of agriculture, Washington.

The following bulletins are both instructive and practical for housekeepers: Farmers' bulletin, bulletin 391, economical use of meats; bulletin 74, the use of milk as a food; bulletin 413, the care of milk and its use in the home; bulletin 332, nuts and their uses as a food; bulletin 85, fish as food; bulletin 175, home manufacture and use of unfermented grape juice; bulletin 34, meats, composition and cooking; bulletin 93, sugar as a food; bulletin 293, use of fruit as food; bulletin 203, canned fruit, preserves and jellies; bulletin 375, care of food in the home.

The United States department of agriculture will supply the following: Bulletin 56, instructions in cooking; bulletin 6, bread and breadmaking.

Idea For the Needlewoman. When the fascination of ornamental needlework has once laid hold upon a woman it is hard for her to resist the temptation to continue the work after back and eyes give warning that it is time to lay it down, or the piece of work may be something that has to be finished within a limited space of time if it is to be of any use at all. In that case here is an idea that may be of service: Instead of continuing to leave over the work, let the worker take the fattest, softest sofa pillow available and put it in her lap. If the arms are allowed to rest on it it will give several kinds of relief. The changed focus relieves the strain on attentive eyes. The altered position not only rests the muscles of the back, but those of the lungs, which too often become unconsciously cramped by the forward droop of weary shoulders, until the seamstress is taking only "quarter sized" breaths.

The Aeroplane Sleeve. It must be a nuisance because of its sleeves, for there's always a pair of sleeves. Whether a woman actually can fly with them or not is a question. Certainly they look big enough and enough like wings.

The aeroplane wings grow up from the waist line and down from the shoulder and come together in a gauntlet at the wrist, so that when the arms of the wearer are stretched out the sleeves are seen to be huge, batlike affairs, extending the sides of the blouse to unheard of proportions. They are as big and floppy as the sleeves of a college gown. The ordinary kimono type is quite put into the shade. However, as they are the latest thing to fly over from Paris it is certain that they will "take."

The Wise Bachelor. "They tell me," said the fair widow, "that you are a student of human nature?" "Yes," admitted the old bachelor, "and I have learned a few things about women also."—Chicago News.

Why They Married. A man sent out postcards to all the married men of his town asking them, "Why did you marry?" Here are one or two of the replies: "That's what I've been trying for eleven years to find out.—X." "Married to get even with her mother, but never have.—W." "Please don't stir me up.—J." "Because it is just my luck.—P." "Because I asked her if she'd have me. She said she would. She got me.—Q."

Huxley on Men. Professor McGoozle once wrote to Mrs. W. K. Chifford about men. "They are very queer animals—a mixture of horse nervousness, ass stubbornness and camel malice, with an angel hobbling about unexpectedly like the apple in the posset, and when they can do exactly as they please they are very hard to drive."

STAFFORD.

Those who have clover seed are now busily engaged in threshing it. Some are beginning to plow for fall grain.

H. E. Hayes, father of the prospective mayor of Oregon City, came home with his daughter, Mrs. Millem, on Monday for a visit to the old home. Mr. Hayes is well and widely known, having come with his young wife to the same Hayes hill in 1852 where he now returns occasionally as a visitor. The death of his wife, advancing years and poor health make it imperative that other hands should lift the burden from his shoulders and that he should rest free from care where his manhood was spent in trying to clear up this part of the country and make Stafford bloom as Guy Gebhardt is doing a well up but did not stay a whole year. They have rented Mrs. M. R. Brook's place. Mrs. Hickman spent a week visiting at Hubbard with Mrs. Mary Simmons, who lived here years ago as Mrs. Oren Holmes.

Next Sunday will be Rally Day at the Mountain View Sunday school. All come.

O. A. Vanhoy went to Goldendale, Wash., to attend the State Fair and see his old friends.

Mrs. Linn is able to be out again. Lawrence Mautz came from his claim near Madras last week where he has been building a house and barn. His wife will go back with him this week.

Mrs. D. L. Torrence returned home from the hospital last week.

Mrs. Hattie Merrill and daughter, Blanche, are visiting friends here this week.

W. G. Hall, of Rockwood, spent Sunday at home.

Harry Scoth, who spent his vacation here with his parents, returned to Corvallis Sunday morning to reenter school.

On the land he recently purchased of Mr. Gage and at the present writing has got down 30 feet with a number of feet of water in the morning, but is going deeper.

The many friends of Will Fredericks were sorry to hear of the painful accident which befell him on last Tuesday. He, it will be remembered, married Barbara Moser and they went up to Alberta. He and a brother-in-law went for lumber 40 miles. In returning, when about eight miles on the homeward journey, in going down a hill, the load shifted throwing the unfortunate man on to the tongue which started the horses and he fell under the wagon. The other man managed to take him to a doctor and was waiting for him to return, as he had gone with his wife for a ride. He could not tell in his hastily written letter, while waiting for the doctor, how badly he was hurt but one leg was broken and he feared internal injuries.

The carpenters have left, who were at work on the little church until the building can be lathed and plastered but Mr. Neal is putting the first coat of paint on.

Mrs. Nemic finished baling hops on Tuesday and others are baling.

Buyers are flying about trying to secure all they see in sight but the growers are quite independent and do not bite very eagerly. We have some have been offered 30, 32 and 35c and most of them are in possession of 40c. It is said that Mr. Poyner has a banner crop of hops on his acre field. One grower had contracted his for three years for the year this is the last year and all hops will do better next year.

Mrs. Neal and baby are visiting in this neighborhood this week.

A few ladies met with Mrs. C. Thurstad and perfected the organization of a society to be known as The Circle, whose object is social improvement, social literary and aid any project deemed proper by society and the dues are placed only 10c per month, the society meet monthly at the homes of its members. All ladies are invited, or young, and it is hoped to make a power of good in the neighborhood drawing neighbors who are now the most strangers into a common bond of sisterhood.

Meeting was concluded at the residence of Mrs. Gage, who had been elected president until the regular meeting in December, all rose to thank and, led by Mrs. Brink, repeated the Lord's Prayer, after which the service and all returned home rejoicing.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE

A LESSON FOR YOU. Why did Mlle. Lantime die? The question vexed the gay world of Paris a few weeks ago when the beautiful actress deliberately walked over the side of her yacht and was drowned.

From a worldly point of view she had everything she could desire. Lantime was a famous beauty, a successful actress and the wife of a millionaire. Her fine home was in the most aristocratic section. She had splendid jewels, horses, automobiles, a steam yacht.

Now, it was asked—Why should a woman who had everything her heart could desire throw away her life? Is such a thing conceivable?

Yes. To have everything you want is not to make you happy. This woman had nothing left to desire. And to desire is human. So long as we desire and strive we live. When there is nothing more to desire or strive for we die.

Alexander sighed for more worlds to conquer. We are like Alexander. There can be no rest in life without the chance to conquer. Alexander sighed because all the sparkle was taken out of life.

When we have everything we want life is flat, stale and unprofitable. When the incentive of tomorrow's struggle is gone tomorrow is gone.

Fullness is satiety. Mlle. Lantime, whose youth and talents had smoothed the way for her feet from girlhood, had sounded every note in the gamut of pleasure.

There was nothing left to live for. On the other hand, there was this: Weariness and vexation of spirit, the vanity of luxury, the tire of dissipation, fear of the loss of fame or beauty.

Do you see? You may say truly, "What pleasure this woman might have found in doing good?" But her life was not keyed to benevolence. She was shut up to selfish enjoyments. When these palled upon her she was eager to throw her life away.

And you? Do you envy the idle rich? Do you not see when fortune leaves nothing to be desired life is intolerable? What you call the bitterness of strife and anxiety is the real source of your life's sweetness.
