MARRIAGE

"Bert Parsons," sez Manda, "is just a Joe Dandy!" But still I tho't his chance was slim. Till one day Manda married him.

Next time I saw Manda, I sez, "How's Joe Dandy?" But Manda only shook her head. An' said she wished that she was dead.

It sets me stewin' to see trouble brewin'. An' I do say a mother oughter beat common sense into her daughter.

"Manda," sez I, "when you was so high, You couldn't read, ner spell, ner figger. No more'n a anti-bellum nigger.

"Till you learned how; the point is, now Jest study Bert, like a good wife. Or a divorce may wreck your life.

The gravy's lumpy, husband gets grumpy; Then laugh an' say you bet a dime There won't be nary lump next time.

When business worries, and parsons burries, Frets and gets in a dreadful stew, Says, "Oh goll darn it!" as men do.

Keep sweet and steady, nor be too ready To give back angry "tit for tat," But train him sometimes for all that.

Next time I saw Manda, I sez, "How's Joe Dandy?" Then Manda laughed and said she bet She'd learn to "read and spell" him yet. SAMANTHA OF CLACKAMAS CO.

BOYS WHO LEFT HOME TO FLY STILL IN JAIL

Chief of Police Shaw expects replies today to telegrams which he sent Thursday afternoon to the parents of Clyde Kast, fourteen years of age, of 5736 Juan Terrace, Hillman Wash., and George Cristopher, sixteen years of age, of 2215 Eighth avenue, Seattle. The boys left home to visit the stepfather of Cristopher, who is in Sacramento building an aeroplane. They expected to be allowed to operate the machine. Cristopher said he had it when he left home but the money did not last long. They "beat" their way from Seattle to Portland, and were arrested upon their arrival in this city by Policemen Green and Cook. Letters written to the addresses given by the lads were returned.

NAVY'S TRIBUTE TO SCHLEY IMPRESSIVE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—(Special.)—After denouncing and repudiating Admiral Winfield Scott Schley during his lifetime, and officially refusing to approve his conduct at Santiago, in the naval battle of which he was the hero, the United States navy outdid itself here today in paying tribute to the man who destroyed Cervera's fleet, now that he is dead. The funeral held here today was one of the most imposing ever held in the National capital.

Men who were the bitterest in their denunciation of the living Schley, the men who hurled such terms as "coward," "cathin" and "traitor" at his head were the most prominent figures in the funeral cortege. The military and naval display was exceedingly elaborate, and was in charge of Rear Admiral Badger. In the line of march was the Annapolis naval band, followed in order by 700 midshipmen, 500 marines, 400 blue-jackets, a battery of field artillery and scores of caissons.

Admiral Dewey, lifelong friend of Schley, and his staunchest supporter, who championed his cause in regard to the Santiago question when opposition to the late admiral was at its blackest, was unable to attend the final rites. Admiral Dewey is reported to be in feeble health. Following out a request made several years ago by Admiral Schley during the last few years, the first services were conducted at the Schley family residence on I-stre here, the Rev. Croix Masonic rites being conducted by Rev. J. L. Sebring, the vicar of the Episcopal chapter. B. P. French Lodge of Masons participated prominently in the ceremonies.

The prizes were won by Mrs. C. H. Meisner and Mrs. W. A. Shewman. During the afternoon a luncheon was served, Lucile Evans and Velma Randall assisting the hostess in service. Those in attendance were Mrs. W. A. Shewman, Mrs. Theodore Osmond, Mrs. E. T. Avison, Mrs. C. H. Meisner, Mrs. J. H. Walker, Mrs. E. P. Rands, Mrs. Henry O'Malley, Mrs. George Hankins, Mrs. C. W. MRS. NORRIS PLANS M'LOUGHLIN FUND

Mrs. J. W. Norris, former president of the Woman's Club, and who has been the leader in heartily supporting the McLaughlin monument, is planning a fund to provide the McLaughlin monument. It is Mrs. Norris' plan to give an entertainment this month, the proceeds from which will start the fund. It is thought that when the start is made there will be little trouble in raising the money for a memorial in honor of the "Father of Oregon." Mrs. Norris and Mrs. Caulfield, president of the Women's Club, will attend the State Federation of Women's Clubs which will convene at Roseburg, October 17, 18 and 19.

BREWERS TRYING TO BEAR HOP MARKET

A rather remarkable feature of the hop market at this time is the apparent apathy of the brewers. In the face of what in all quarters is conceded to be a decidedly bullish situation the consumers of hops are showing a disposition to hold off, seemingly in the belief that a little later they will be able to cover their needs for the coming year at lower prices than now prevail. That disappointment is in store for many of them is counted very probable.

Eastern orders for hops are not coming with anything like the freedom usual at this time of the year, and the obvious explanation of this is an attempt on the part of interested dealers and consumers to bear the market. The outlook for the future of the hop market, however, is anything but bearish. That the world's crop is materially short of actual requirements for the year to come has been well established. In view of this a bear campaign at this time of the year can hardly be expected to accomplish much.

There are sellers here and there at going prices—31 to 33 cents—though as yet no great pressure to unload has developed in the country," said a dealer. "But the market remains comparatively quiet. This is due to the fact that orders are not coming in from the East at the rate usually expected at this time of the year. It is clear that many of the consumers hope for lower prices later in the season, and it is quite as clear, to us at least, that in the hop situation generally there is no ground for any such hope. The chances are that many of the brewers who are now holding off against present prices will find it necessary later to pay a good deal more."

Dealers say that approximately half of the Oregon crop has passed out of the hands of growers, this including contracts closed during the growing season and sales since the harvest of the crop began. For the unsold portion the market outlook is considered favorable. The brewers on both sides of the Atlantic must soon take on supplies for the coming year.
