MAYOR OFFICIATES
AT FIRST WEDDING

Mayor Brownell officiated Friday at the marriage of Miss Luella Davis and Arthur Davis. This was the first marriage ceremony performed by the mayor, who was prevailed upon by friends to officiate. He had been asked frequently before to act in a similar capacity, but always declined, preferring that the ministers and justices of the peace perform the duties. The bridegroom tendered the mayor a substantial fee which Mr. Brownell declined. The happy young couple were delighted over the distinction of having caused the mayor to break a rule which he established when he assumed the duties of the office. Mr. Brownell, however, declared that he would not marry any more couples.

MANY SEE EXHIBITS
AT PROMOTION OFFICE

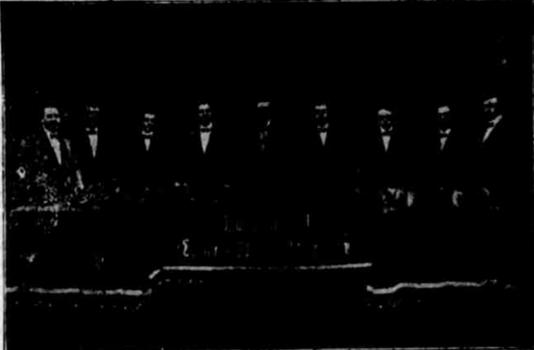

Since the Promotion Office of the Oregon City Commercial Club was rearranged, a great many persons are calling to see the fine display of agricultural and horticultural products. The mineral display from the Ogle Mountain mines is also attracting a great deal of attention. The office is open from 8 o'clock in the morning until 5 p. m.
 Among the recent callers was J. W. Holmes, of Concord. Mr. Holmes is one of the new arrivals who is greatly pleased with this part of Oregon. He came from California last spring and the first thing he did was to plant a field to potatoes and he now affirms that his potatoes are by far the best he has ever seen.
 John Harms, of Aurora, called on last Friday and was greatly pleased with the showing of agricultural products. He said that he came direct from Germany to Clackamas county thirty-nine years ago and would not leave for any consideration as he thinks it the best place in the world. He has a farm of eighty acres and is engaged in general farming. His sons are grown and have farms of their own in the same neighborhood. One of them is H. D. Harms, the noted breeder of Cotswood sheep.

HOPS IS COAST YIELD

Out of a total crop of 185,000 bales of hops on the Pacific Coast this season, only 29,800 bales are at present unsold in the hands of growers, according to the most liberal estimates made by leading dealers.
 Sales in Oregon to date this season have aggregated 65,000 bales, the greatest amount ever moved during any similar period in this state. In Washington the sales up to this time reach a total of 17,200 bales, leaving but 2,800 bales unsold. Some later estimates say that not more than 2,000 bales are still retained by Washington growers.
 In California the selling has not been so heavy since the season started, a large per cent of the crop there being taken under contract prior to growth. It is now estimated that but 17,500 bales are retained by the growers of California.
 There has been a fair buying of hops both in Oregon and in Washington during the past 24 hours. In the Willamette Valley there was considerable business reported between dealers. Seavey Hop Company purchased 70 bales of the Elwert crop at Sherwood at 41 1-2c.
 In Western Washington Hugh Herren, Isaac Pincus & Son and Herman Klaber, were liberal purchasers of small lots at 40 and 40 1-2c a pound. In all 500 bales changed hands during the 24 hours. In the Yakima section there was likewise a fair volume of business reported.
 Prevailing Oregon City prices are as follows:
 HIDES—(Buying)—Green hides, 5c to 6c; salted, 5c to 6c; dry hides, 12c to 14c; sheep pelts, 25c to 75c each.
 Hay, Grain, Feed.
 HAY—(Buying)—Timothy, $12 to $15; clover, $8 to $9; oat hay, best, $9 to $10; mixed, $9 to $12; alfalfa, $9 to $16.50.

Imperial Bell Ringers
Play Here Monday

The Imperial Hand Bell Ringers, of England, who will give a concert at the Shively opera house Monday evening, have won ten contests and for ten years have been champions of England as bell ringers. Two years ago, Mr. Peffer, of the Red Path Bureau was sent abroad to find the best musical company in Europe. After hearing dozens of them, he selected the Imperial Hand Bell Ringers. They play a large peal of bells and play them most brilliantly. They play in peaves, that is, two sets of bells play the tune, one octave above the other, in order to give brilliancy to the music, and yet this selection is so difficult that it takes the best of orchestras to play it well. No ordinary hand bell company could think of attempting it. They play "Camrades in Arms" with beautiful harmony and several comic selections such as "The Old Soldier" conservative with the tenor. And one of the best things in their "Onward Christian Soldiers." This great hymn was written by the rector of their little church so that they might have a song they could march by at Sunday school picnics as they were too poor to hire a band. The large bell is so heavy that it once broke the thumb of the man swinging it, so that he put braces on his wrist in order that it might not happen again. The bells are made in the best bell factories in the world.
 Mr. Giggle has made a special study of hand bell ringing and has got together the finest combination of bell ringers in the country. During the fall of 1909, he had a successful tour with the Redpath Lyceum Bureau. The songs with bell accompaniment are a decided novelty and are everywhere encored. The vocal work of the quartet is another strong feature of the program, as the fame of Yorkshire Glee singing is world-wide. Mr. Giggle has recently introduced another novelty, a piccolo solo with bell accompaniment, which is proving very popular. The repertoire of the company includes sufficient numbers to fill two or three evening's entertainment without any repetitions.

ATHLETICS SUPERIOR IN ALL DEPARTMENTS

The great series is over, and the Athletics have won the highest honors possible in the baseball world for the season of 1911. Connie Mack has been one of the most successful of managers, but it is safe to say that he has never tasted sweeter fruits of victory than in the present case. It is not only victory, but revenge as New York is the only club which has ever beaten out his White Elephants in a series of so much importance.
 In every department of the game but base-stealing the New York men were outplayed. And the Giants were able to get but one more pilfered sack than the Mackites, in spite of their well-known proclivities in this line. As was anticipated, New York failed to hit up to expectations, having but one good day with the stick, that of the Wednesday game, when they walloped Coombs and Plank in the closing stanzas, winning a tenning victory. The Athletics not only hit the ball hard, but over one-third of their swats were for extra bases.
 Philadelphia had a team batting average of .246, not bad when in three of the six games they were facing one of the greatest pitchers the game has ever seen. New York could get but .173 in the same length of time, and they, too, were up against the real thing in the twirling line. New York's extra base column dwindles into insignificance in comparison with that of their rivals, as nine doubles and one triple was the extent of their assault upon the curves of Bender, Coombe and company.

Larry Doyle and Chief Myers were the only Gothamites who stung the leather with any degree of consistency, the New York captain annexing a figure of .304 and Myers getting .286. The rest of the team fell away badly, Red Murray failing to get a single single throughout the contest. And Red is a good sticker, too, but simply couldn't manage to drive the ball safe.

Frank Baker, of course, was the leading man with the willow for Connie Mack's hirelings, and the way he soaked the ball on the seam was a caution. Baker hit for a mark of .375 for the series, and they were all of the clean, healthy brand, most of them being for extra bases, including two doubles and two home runs, all of them coming when they would do the most damage.

The big surprise of the series was the hitting of Barry. The young shortstop was known to be one of the best fielders in the game, but was considered the only weakling of the regulars with the stick. For once he hung the kibosh on the heads of the wise ones, and finished in the position of runner up to Baker, having a mark of .350 for the series, including four doubles.

Murphy and Collins figure as the next men on the list, Collins not proving the star with the stick that he did in 1910.

In fielding the Athletics again carried off the honors, although neither Collins nor Pletcher had four each. Each of them was fast on his feet and went after everything, and there is some excuse for their misplays.

Summing up the data, it cannot be denied that the best team won, and the records clearly show it. New York put up a game fight, and its youngsters made a more creditable showing than did the Cubs last year, which should prove of some consolation.
