CHURCH FOLK HAVE HALLOWE'EN PARTY

One of the most delightful and successful entertainments in this city last week was the Halloween party at the Baptist church parlor Friday evening when the Alerts entertained the Rustlers and a few invited friends. There were about fifty guests. The parlor of the church was a bower of beauty and bright autumn leaves and lanterns were used with artistic effect. A well arranged program prepared by the committee in charge was carried out. As the guests arrived they visited the tent of the "gypsy," Miss Queenie Adams, who was attired in gypsy costume, and who made an attractive fortune-teller. From this booth they were advised by the Gypsy queen to visit the camp of the "ghosts." Miss Maude Moran, being the "ghost." Here they partook of the "ghost soup," and from here visited the camp of the "ghosts" on the second floor. All kinds of Halloween games were played and all the guests had a good time. Coffee and cake were served. The Baraca boys of the Baptist church donated a box of apples which were soon disposed of.

M. D. LATOURETTE WINS BOOBY PRIZE

The Newly Weds were entertained at what Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Price at their home Friday evening. The prizes were won by Mrs. Walter Wells and George Hankins. M. D. Latourette was awarded the booby prize, an immense cup and saucer. Among the features of the evening were the solos of Mr. Price, who favored his guests with several, including "I Love You." He was not backward in responding to the hearty encores. He was accompanied on the piano by Mrs. A. A. Price. A delicious luncheon was served. The next meeting will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Hankins.

Four talesmen accepted by both sides as to cause, but still subject to peremptory challenge, two more now under challenge for cause and six in the box waiting examination, was the showing at the end of the third court week. Darrow is said to be displeased with the rulings.

BEAVERS MAKE JOKE OF GAME, OAKS WIN

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 28.—It's little wonder that San Francisco baseball fans don't take to post-season exhibitions. Oakland grabbed the third game of the farcical series with the Beavers today, thereby giving them an edge on an honor that doesn't amount to much. The smallest crowd of the week turned out at Recreation Park and saw the opposing clubs go through the motions.

Guarding London's Treasures. London's art treasures are most jealously protected. The National gallery, in addition to having a secret system of alarms, is patrolled day and night by twenty-two constables and twenty-five employees. At the British museum the millions of pounds' worth of treasures are protected by over 200 assistants, including eight keepers of departments, fifty-three assistants, nine second division clerks, twenty-two chief attendants, ninety-six attendants, five boy clerks, twenty-three boy attendants, forty-three commissionaires and fifty-one laborers, while a number of detectives in various disguises keep an eagle eye on things in general.—London Telegraph.

SPALDING BOOK ON BASEBALL

Famous Ex-Player and Magnate Gives Real Treat to Fans.

A. G. Spalding, whose name is a household word wherever baseball is played, has written a book entitled "America's National Game." It is not a history of baseball, although it necessarily has some portion of its contents devoted to the early days of the game, but is largely a chronicle of personal reminiscences of events that occurred when the game was first established on a stable basis.

Mr. Spalding was first a player and subsequently a magnate and helped draft the first constitution and organize the National league in 1876. His recital of events that occurred in the first decades of the league's existence makes interesting reading, interspersed as it is with anecdotes and accounts of personal incidents in which the stars and magnates of those days figured.

One chapter, devoted to sundry topics, gives an account of the sale of the immortal "King" Kelly, the original "$10,000 beauty," by Chicago to the Boston club in the late eighties. Mr. Spalding writes:

"The first time I had to do with the selling of players was in 1887. I had withdrawn from active participation in the game as a player, but was president of the Chicago White Stockings at that time the finest team of ball players in the world. The players were so capable that they were expected to win every game. It did seem almost impossible for them to lose. Twice in succession they had captured the championship pennant, and the praises of the individual performances of Anson, Kelly, Flint, Williamson, Dairymple, Gore, Clarkson, Pfeffer, McCormick and Sunday were on every body's lips.

"Now, experience had shown that the keeping of the same players together for too long a time is prejudicial to the interests of the game, so I decided to let some players go. But what ones? That was not so easy to decide. One bright morning I broached the subject of the proposed change to Captain Anson, asking him if he could spare Kelly.

"Spare him? Sure. Spare anybody," was the reply.

"So I sent for Kelly and asked him: 'Kelly, how would you like to go to Boston to play?'

"I don't want any Boston in mine Chicago's good enough for me."

"Well, you're good enough for Chicago, too," I said, "but wouldn't you like more salary?'

"Well, I guess yes," said Kelly.

"What salary would you go to Boston for?" I continued.

"He thought a moment, then said, almost as if ashamed to ask it, 'Four thousand dollars.'

"He was receiving $3,000 at Chicago, which was the limit in those days."

"I think I can get you $5,000," said I.

"He beamed all over at the prospect."

"Now, Mike," I said, "you don't care how much we get for your release."

"If you get me $5,000 I don't care if you sell me for a hundred thousand."

"All right. Now keep your mind and let me conduct negotiations, and remember, if you get a letter from Boston asking your terms it's $5,000, not $4,000."

"I took the matter up with the manager of the Boston club, telling him that King Kelly might possibly be secured. He bit, in a few days I got a letter asking the price. I replied that $10,000 would purchase the king. He couldn't wait to write. He wired me, 'Terms for Kelly accepted,' and the sale was made."

"Meanwhile Kelly had also been receiving telegrams and got his contract for three years at $5,000."

"Subsequently, Clarkson, the White Stockings' superb pitcher, was also sold to Boston, and later Gore went to New York, but we overbid the matter a trifle, and lost the pennant that year."

M'COY HAS HARD ROAD.

"Comeback Kid" Will Be Wise to Steer Clear of Langford.

Having beaten three third class heavyweights with a knockout punch, Kid McCoy is prepared to tackle harder game. So far his next opponent has not been selected, but Sailor Burke, Jim Smith and Morris Harris are mentioned.

The suspicion gains ground that McCoy is preparing himself for a bout with Johnson when the black champion begins to show deterioration, the nimble Kid apparently believing he can take the title from the negro.

But there are obstacles to such a plan, the greatest of which is the stumpy Bostonian known as Sam Langford. McCoy once he sets sail for Johnson, could not with propriety draw the color line on Langford, and if McCoy ever should get into the ring with the Boston Tar Baby the originator of the corker punch will never get a chance to battle with Johnson.

On the whole, therefore, McCoy would do well to confine his efforts to Burke, Harris and Smith and stay away from Langford. McCoy has done surprisingly well since he resumed his ring career, but it is a trifle too much to expect him to reach the championship over the prostrate forms of Sam Langford and Jack Johnson.

Chink After Welterweight Honors. Shades of hoponey! It had to come Battling To Kim, who whipped all the welterweights in the Flowery Kingdom, is anxious to fight some "Mellie" man at 145 pounds. Battling To is training at Johnson's roadhouse in New York and is said to be there with bells on when it comes to fighting.

A Crop Bulletin. Five-year-old Ella had been enthusiastically engaged in garden work all the spring. She was especially interested in planting seed and watched anxiously for sprouts to appear above the ground.

One day while visiting a neighbor who possessed a six-month-old baby Ella was delighted to see two tiny front teeth displayed when the baby smiled.

"Oh, Mrs. May," the little girl cried excitedly, "the baby's teeth have come up!"—Youth's Companion.

APPLE MARKET IS SHOWING STRENGTH

The apple market has developed considerable strength since the first of the month. The demand for all grades, even to common stock, continues good, and jobbers say that as a result of the generally light supply showing at this time the prospect is for a well-maintained market throughout the fall and winter. The best apples now going to the Portland market find fairly ready sale at $2 to $2.50 a box, while common to fair grade fruit goes at $1.25 to $1.75. Brokers dealing with the Eastern markets report a strong demand for extra fancy and fancy grades that are well packed, well graded and well colored, while for the small sizes and poor pack goods the demand is feeble or wholly lacking.

Prevailing Oregon City prices are as follows:

HIDES—(Buying)—Green hides, 5c to 6c; safters, 5c to 6c; dry hides, 12c to 14c; sheep pelts, 25c to 75c each.

FOUR HURT IN AUTO CRASH AT GREENPOINT

Mrs. Peter Shinville, who was in an automobile Friday afternoon which was struck by the electric car in Greenpoint, is suffering from injuries to her right arm. It was first reported that Mrs. Shinville was uninjured. She was unable to use her arm Saturday. Mrs. Shinville says there is no doubt that the driver of the passengers in the automobile had not held her four-year-old daughter, the child would have been thrown under the car wheels and killed. The young man, who was among those injured, showed wonderful presence of mind and remained with the car until it crashed in the Straight house. Mrs. Shinville and her child also were in the car when it struck the house.

W. F. Schooley, who was struck on the back by one of the seats of the automobile, is suffering from the severe bruises, and was unable to be at his office Saturday. D. Anderson, whose leg was injured, is suffering severely, and it will be several days before he will be able to wear a shoe. Warner, who was driving the car, escaped with a few scratches.

CANAL INSPECTED BY STATE BOARD

actual value of its property. I cannot blame the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company, for asking $600,000 for its west side locks, and I suppose, if I were an officer of that corporation, I would make it my business to get all the money possible."

Governor West said that the reports of the company operating the locks showed that in recent years the annual gross receipts has been about $9,000, and he suggested that the next legislature should enact a measure making it possible to place the state's appropriation out at interest and make the present locks free by using the interest on the appropriation to cover the lockage charges.

The visitors left for Portland early in the afternoon to inspect the maps and surveys of the proposed routes in the office of Major McIndoe. The members of the Canal Board and the Government engineers were given a very cordial welcome in Oregon City and voiced their appreciation of the hospitality of the Commercial Club.

Luncheon Big Success. The Commercial Club luncheon was an unusually pleasing affair, the menu cards being designed in three colors, with a picture of Governor West in tint under the printed menu and the American flag in red, white and blue at the top of the cards, which were eagerly seized upon and taken away as souvenirs of the occasion. The menu cards were executed in the printing department of The Enterprise. The following luncheon was served:
