WON AT FOOTBALL

By CARL SARGENT CHASE Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"You are too young, my dear, to marry by several years, and so is Billy, who graduated only last year and is at the foot of the second lieutenant."

The words were spoken by Mrs. Baxter, wife of Major Baxter, instructor at West Point, to her daughter, Annette, aged seventeen years and eight months and engaged to Lieutenant Billy Dolman of the 4th Infantry.

"Besides," continued Mrs. Baxter, with a teasing sparkle in her eye, "Billy is coaching the football team for the annual game with the middies and has all he can do to fit them for the struggle. He has no time to devote to preparation for matrimony."

"I wish you were not so devoted to our boys winning, mamma," said the daughter.

"And I wish Billy to have his mind on his coaching exclusively."

"Perhaps if he knew that you had consented to our marriage it would make him so happy that he would pull the boys through. He thinks about your refusal all the time."

"I'll tell you what I'll do," said Mrs. Baxter after some thought. "If Billy's team wins I'll consent to your wedding the minute the game is over."

"May I say that to him?"

"Yes, you may, and that if he loses you must wait a year."

Annette rushed off to the telephone, called up her lover and announced the conditions.

"Mother is demented about our boys winning the annual game this year, and that has induced her to yield what she has yielded. I never dreamed that she would ever give us a chance. She has persistently said that I shouldn't marry before I am twenty."

Billy was so excited over the news that he told his chum, who told his other chum, and Annette told her bosom friend, who told her other bosom friend, and the result was that within a few days every one knew "as a great secret" that if Billy Dolman brought the army team up to an efficiency that would enable them to beat the middies he was to win a wife.

If not he would have to wait a year. Besides the waiting there's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip. Then, since all the post knew it, Billy told the team, adding that his cup of joy or misery was in their hands.

All the world loves a lover, and the spirit the announcement infused into the team was something remarkable. Every man went into more steady training than before, and not a man shirked a moment of practice when the team was being coached. Billy worked with them like a Titan. Indeed, so hard did he make it for them that every man who was not physically up to his work got out and gave place to a better. The result was that when the last few days before the game came round Billy was conscious of having as good a team as could be turned out of the material at his disposal.

Annette one afternoon during the training went out to view the practice game, but her appearance was marked by a cheer, which brought the blush of maidenly modesty to her cheek, and she did not venture on the field again.

Then came the day of the fight, which that year took place at West Point. The president of the United States, the chief of the general staff and hosts of others in authority were spectators. The middies marched on to the ground headed by their band, while the cadets kept step to the strains of their own martial music. Annette, conscious that she, being the prize of the day, would attract unbounded attention, refused to be present, but the captain of the army team sent word to her that if she did not come to cheer his boys he would not answer for the consequences. This brought her to terms, and when Lieutenant Dolman escorted her to her seat she was received by a buzz from the army team and the waving of handkerchiefs from the spectators.

In the first half the middies made one touchdown, distinguishing themselves by brilliant play. The army men showed as much vigor and determination at the end of the half as at the beginning. In the second half that esprit born of the feeling that the fate of a pair of lovers depended on their efforts began to tell on the army men, while the elan of the earlier part of the game shown by the middies began to give way. Billy Dolman kept himself constantly before their notice. And from her seat Annette Baxter waved to them. When time was called for the game to close the score stood 12 to 4 in favor of the army.

The army team before leaving the field went in a body to where Annette had been sitting to cheer her, but the bird had flown. Headed by Lieutenant Dolman, they went to Major Baxter's quarters and demanded the girl. When it was found that they were not to be put off Mrs. Baxter announced that she was ready to keep her agreement and that the wedding should take place that evening.

And so it was that in the presence of the team, to whom leave was given to attend, William Dolman and Annette Baxter were married. There was a considerable stir about Major Baxter's quarters during the evening by those who couldn't get inside, and after the ceremony the bride and groom, responding to calls, went outside and received hearty cheers from all who were interested in the game that had been won.

SHIVELY'S OPERA HOUSE. Essay and Scenery Two Nights, November 20 and 21 at 8 p. m. The ESSAY which is to be READ Shively's opera house November 20-21, takes in a whole world's description as to a world's main differences, we cannot give all the differences in a world for the want of time so the ESSAY can be read in one evening, but will give the principal differences. Differences are a SUN, MOON, STARS and EARTH, as main differences, the rest are all at odds and anything that looks different is classed as differences.

We show the way that a world commenced to form in the beginning if any the way it divided and went to differences holding substances unto its finish, or the end of a world's proceedings. We put out the way that heat and gas started in a world, the result of heat and gas, the courses it takes, the way the world makes its differences, the way the waters are divided, the courses they take. The way vegetation starts to grow, the differences, classed to some extent, the way all seeds are germed by a world, the way they divide growing two ways while circle motion holds control. We figure a SUN fore motion, and give the differences for it, we figure that a moon is nothing but motion, and give its differences.

We figure gas as a renderer, we figure really all stars, and give the way a world makes its winds, and give the reasons for winds starting up to blow and the substance therein, and how winds are shifted, and why winds cease to blow, and why winds will continue to blow from some quarter of a world more than others, we figure a negative STORM to a finish, and estimate a positive storm.

We put out the course of a SUN and MOON circle, we put out the course of ECLIPSES of the sun and moon, we put out a COMET or a METEOR. We put out positive and negative courses and the results. We figure three globes and the result to some extent. We estimate a man's time on the earth and give the reason that he leaves his body. We follow water on the earth and the way it handles the lands, we put out all the reasons for tide waters, the way the world works to put them into action—and the RAINBOW, differences. We reckon a Volcano from the beginning to an end, and motion ceasing with the explosion. We put out the way a world makes its COALS, and why they come soft and hard COALS. We put out how a world makes its DIAMONDS, we put out how a world makes its OILS, and its ISIN-GLASS. We figure the Substances for all Minerals, and why there are differences in Minerals. We give the reasons for a moon coming later each evening. We have figured a whole world, we take in a little of ZOOLOGY, and extend some toward a human Race, and the whole world is always in motion, and give many other differences. The ESSAY consists of fifty leaflet sheets in print, and some SCHEMATIC. The ESSAY has cost thousands of dollars and hard STUDY. Do not miss it. It takes about two and a half hours to read the ESSAY. ADMISSION 50c—Children at one and fifteen, 25c. Do not assume the ESSAY until you have heard it ALL READ.
