Harvard and Yale Ready For Annual Clash on the Gridiron

By TOMMY CLARK.
THE eleven of Harvard and Yale are ready for their annual clash on the gridiron to be played in Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 25. This game will mark the close of the big eastern season. From present indications the game should be hard fought from start to finish.
A close analysis of the Harvard-Yale eleven shows that they are very evenly matched. Yale has a slight advantage in weight, and perhaps its line is a little speedier. But the Crimson back field eclipses the Blue in all departments.
Harvard has two fast ends in Smith and O'Brien. They outclass the Yale pair, Francis and Avery. Smith is one of the best end men playing the game this season. He is a hard tackler, a swift runner and a great handler of the forward passes. Crimson supporters put their faith in the ability of Smith and O'Brien to effectively prevent the speedy Captain Howe from making any of his long runs. Yale has also two good subs in Bomelsier and Rhedion.

At the tackle positions it is a tossup. The Yale pair, Paul and Scully, have a little more experience than Captain Fisher and Hitchcock, but the last two mentioned have the weight which may count for much in the coming battle.
Yale seems to have an edge in the matter of guards. Loree and McDavitt have played a consistently good defensive game all season. Leslie of Harvard has also played a good game, but McKaeya, who has succeeded Fisher, the latter going to tackle, has had but little practical experience.
Ketcham is a heavier man at center than Storer and in all around ability is superior to the Crimson middle man.
At quarterback Yale excels Harvard. Captain Howe is one of the best ever turned out at Yale. He is a great field general and a splendid manipulator of the forward pass and a fast runner with the ball and an accurate kicker. He will be the man that Harvard will have to watch in the coming game. Crimson has a good quarterback in Potter, but he does not class with Howe.
Harvard has the better back field men. Campbell, Wendell and Huntington are equally proficient at either bring down. He, too, is a good kicker, and with the punting done by two men the Ells will not find it necessary to plan to save the kicker in the big game with Harvard. One or both players will surely be used in some place in the back field.

Phibbin is a good runner and not easy to stop, but it is hard to tell just when he will make a disastrous fumble.
If Harvard makes the same mistakes as she did in the recent battle with Princeton, Yale will win. In the game with the Tigers Harvard relied on Wendell to carry the ball most of the time, and all the Tiger men had to do was to play him. They watched Wendell like a hawk and generally smothered his rush before he got started. He did get through many times, but did not make any great gains.
Harvard and Yale have met on the gridiron thirty times since 1876, in which time Harvard has won only four games, four have been tied, and Yale has won twenty-two. Up until 1908 Harvard had not defeated Yale since 1901, when Campbell's great eleven, considered by many critics as one of the best that ever handled a football, triumphed by a score of 20 to 0 over a Yale eleven that had best on Princeton a week before. The list below shows the record of the Yale-Harvard games since 1876:

rushing through the line or skirting the ends. Wendell, a consistent ground gainer, is perhaps without a peer in the game this season. Campbell is a very fast runner in a broken field, while Huntington, "the Harvard strong man," is what his name implies—a power in advancing the ball and stone wall on the defense.
Yale's principal weakness, as shown in several games, was at fullback, where Anderson has failed to show the improvement expected of him. The former Wisconsin man is awkward and does not handle the ball cleanly. There is a chance that Anderson will not be used in this game and that either Freeman or Spalding may be placed at the position. Both of these men have shown in recent games that they are versatile and dependable. Spalding's versatility is picking openings and kicking, while Freeman is a hard man to

M'LOUGHLIN AND BARCLAY PLAY TIE

The McLoughlin Institute and the Barclay School baseball teams played a tie game at Canemah Park Tuesday afternoon. The score was 2 to 2 at the end of the fifth inning when Umpires Cross and Green called the game on account of darkness. The game was exciting throughout. Batcher Kobolink caught. Story and Story were the McLoughlin Institute battery.

Gummed Stamps.
The inventor of the gummed stamp was a Scotchman, James Chalmers of Dundee, who in 1834 suggested the use of adhesive slips. He was much ridiculed, especially by doctors, who said the proposal to lick stamps would spread disease. The postoffice gave no serious attention to the proposal until 1841.

HOP GROWERS ARE ASKING 50 CENTS

The demand for hops continues strong, and for the best 45c is freely obtainable, but the scattering lots of 1911s that remain in growers' hands at this time are very firmly held and the little trade now passing for the most part involves small holdings. The growers are bullish and latest market developments appear to fully justify them in their position. For many of the lots not yet disposed of 50c is demanded.
Cables from abroad indicate strong and steadily advancing markets, both in England and on the Continent, and it is believed that the market here has not yet reached the high level for the season.

WILSON IS ELECTED SCHOOL DIRECTOR

Samuel Wilson has been elected director of the Willamette School District to succeed Robert W. Baker, who resigned because of his removal to Independence. Mr. Wilson received twenty-six votes, John Moehne six votes and W. A. Riner ten votes. The election took place Monday night at a special meeting of the taxpayers of the district, and a special levy of seven mills was voted to provide for the maintenance and the payment of interest on bonds. Extra expense will be incurred next year, as an additional teacher will be employed after the building annex is completed and manual training equipment will be installed. The special levy last year was 4 1-2 mills.

Tess—Jack proposed last night, and I accepted him.
Jess—Did you, dear? By the way, don't attempt to cut glass with that diamond, as I did, or you'll make another nick in the stone.

M'BAIN REPORTS ON RATE HEARING

B. T. McBain, mill manager of the Willamette Pulp & Paper Company, appointed a committee of one by the Live Wires to attend the rate hearing of the State Railroad Commission at Salem last week, reported as follows at the luncheon Tuesday:
"As your committee, appointed at your regular session, November 14, I caught the morning train for Salem, November 15, leaving Oregon City at 9:17, arriving at the capitol, Salem, about 11:10 a. m.
The hearing of the Medford case before the Railroad Commission of Oregon had already commenced. After considerable argument on the part of attorneys interested, a Mr. Dwyer, of Umatilla, was placed upon the stand, his examination taking the balance of the morning until 12:30 p. m., when the commission adjourned until 2 o'clock, at which hour the hearing was resumed with your committee on the witness stand.
I am sure my testimony was of no value to the Medford side of the case. While it was, we think, of considerable value to the Southern Pacific and our city and county, it was also in line with the opinions of the members of the commission who personally expressed themselves to the writer during the noon hour.
Your committee happens to be a river man—everybody in Oregon City should be, in fact everybody in every city bordering on the great Willamette river should refuse to give up the natural competitive advantages afforded by this river.
Present carload rates on material from Portland and other points to Oregon City are far lower per 100 pounds on account of water competition than could be expected by an inland city the same distance from a metropolis. Less than carload rates from Portland to Oregon City on the Southern Pacific are high, most of the merchants at the present time paying 17c per 100 pounds from Portland either on shipments from the West or originating at Portland. The old rate was 10c per 100 pounds. The electric freight and O. C. T. boat

FREE AUTOMOBILE

The Morning Enterprise has purchased from the Elliott Garage a new 1912 Model T five-passenger Ford automobile to be given away as a premium in a circulation contest to be inaugurated soon. There is no car manufactured that exceeds the Ford in popularity, and last year the Ford factory sold one-fifth of all the cars purchased in the United States. The car is built for durability and is a roadster par-excellence. Grant B. Dimick, W. A. Huntley, J. E. Hedges, C. Schuebel, Captain J. T. Apperson, F. M. Swift and E. P. Elliott are some of the users of Ford automobiles. There is value in a Ford car and the Morning Enterprise proposes to give one away. We want more circulation and we have spent $785 at one throw to help get it. Watch the Morning Enterprise for future announcements. The field is open. Everybody is going to have a chance to win this fine machine.

handle the Portland business at a lower rate, but Eastern freight if transferred at Portland to either of these companies would cost, including the transfer charge, especially on small shipments, more than is charged by the Southern Pacific. We do not want to make a fight at this time for lower rates Portland to Oregon City but to shape our course in the best possible manner toward securing rational rates on commodities for our city.
Medford is trying to secure a revision of rates irrespective of water competition, making it necessary for the Southern Pacific and any and all other transportation lines to charge a certain rate per mile, whether the freight is handled one mile or 500 miles. The present rate to Oregon City, as stated above, is 17c, while the distance, according to the railroad tariff, is 19 miles.
Albany is 80 miles from Portland, still that city enjoys a rate of 28c. Points south of Albany where no water competition exists have higher rates, for instance from Albany to a point 80 miles south, the rate is 67c per 100 pounds.
We refused to go on record as being in favor of this reduction, stating to the commission that Oregon City merchants and manufacturers think their geographical position, as also the large volume of business transacted via transportation lines, should be considered in the making of rates for both incoming and outgoing freight. We think, as the chairman of the commission stated, that the Medford proposition relative to commodity and distributive rates would tend ultimately to work hardships on the consumers should they be put into effect.
I take it that this committee is a continuance of your committee of 1910, when Mr. L. Adams, as chairman, appointed the writer to look into matter of terminal rates. I now have this proposition about ready to submit to Oregon City business men and manufacturers with the suggestions that a terminal freight rate association be formed for the handling of the matter either with the railroad, or if they will not consider the proposition made, with the railroad commission of Oregon or the commerce court.

Respectfully submitted,
B. T. M'BAIN.
