FALSE WITNESS AGAINST BRYCE.

A foolish attack is made upon the British ambassador at Washington in a Canadian newspaper which ought to know better. In a London cablegram to the Montreal Star the charge is made that "Mr. Bryce, by his attitude in co-operation with President Taft at the initiation of the reciprocity compact, and throughout the discussion, acted as a politician rather than as an ambassador, and entirely failed to inform the British and Canadian governments of the grave imperial interests jeopardized by the designs of Taft, Champ Clark, Hearst and others."

One or two little circumstances will show that the British and Canadian governments knew what was involved in reciprocity. A leading part in framing the scheme was taken by Premier Laurier and his cabinet. London knew the scope of the pact just as early as Washington and New York knew it. It was discussed by newspapers in Canada and England, as well as in the United States, long before the Congress at Washington gave its assent to it. The proposition was before Congress for many weeks before that body could be coaxed into giving it its favor. Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign minister, was queried on reciprocity in Parliament more than a month before Congress passed it, and he made it plain to his countrymen that as Canada was a partner to the framing of the agreement, that province could be relied upon to take care of its own interests in the matter.

All of this ought to be known to the Montreal Star, and also to its London correspondent. No attempt to take snap judgment on either Canada or England was made by anybody in the United States. The talk about the "designs" of "Champ Clark, Hearst and others" is rather silly. These individuals have very little influence with the President of the American people. Their sway over Congress is not very formidable. No international question of our day received a more comprehensive discussion than reciprocity called out in the United States and Canada. By their newspapers the British people were kept in close touch with the discussion, both here and in Canada. Ambassador Bryce is an intelligent, industrious and conscientious representative of his country. During his service in Washington no interest of the British Empire has suffered through any neglect or shortcoming on his side. Canadian Tory hysteria on reciprocity ought to have ended with the close of the canvass on that issue in the Dominion two months ago.

In regard to Persia the Car should make sure that the regrets-to-announce department has been permanently closed.

An inventor has planned a steam engine for aeroplanes. The excitement of the science will not be permitted to fall off in 1912.

Persia's first railroad was opened in 1888. If that country is to call Americans to its aid it will be quicker in discovering a good thing.

Uncle Sam is patient, but revolutionists need not expect that they will be permitted to keep the border in a state of perpetual turbulence.

Pleasant Occupation.
"Slotters made a pile of money in that gold mine of his, didn't he?" asked Willoughby.

"Yes, about five millions," said Hickenlooper.

"What's he doing now?" asked Willoughby.

"Oh, he's resting on his ore," said Hickenlooper.

It was upon presentation of the above under oath that the court asked Willoughby of assault and battery on the ground of extreme provocation.—Harper's Weekly.

The British Seas.
The seas around the coast of the British Isles are mostly narrow. The greatest width of the English channel is between Portland Bill and St. Malo, 140 miles. It narrows to twenty and one-quarter miles at one point in the strait of Dover. The distance between Great Britain and Ireland is even less. To head is only twelve miles from the nearest point of the Mull of Cantire. Between Carnarvon point and St. David's head, in Wales, forty-seven miles is the least breadth of water.

Veneering.
Veneering is not a modern invention, but was introduced in the time of Pharaoh, about 50 A. D. to reduce the cost of the enormously expensive tables of rare woods that were much sought after by wealthy Romans.

What the Women Want Is Justice.
By Mrs. T. P. O'CONNOR, English Suffragist

Not Sentiment and Chivalry.

THE VERY FOUNDATION OF THE RELATIONS BETWEEN MAN AND WOMAN IS WRONG.

We must not rely upon sentiment. What we want and what we demand is JUSTICE.

The laws as they stand today are INADEQUATE. Many of them are markedly unjust to women, and no reformation will take place without the franchise.

It is the duty of woman to force man to a position where INJUSTICE and ARROGANCE and OPPRESSION are IMPOSSIBLE.

Women are brought up by the theory of expecting undying faithfulness, consideration, unselfishness and a taking of all responsibility from their shoulders by man. Slowly, but surely, she has to unlearn this false lesson. There are men in the world, many of them, tenderly chivalrous to women. But we do not, we must not, rely upon sentiment. What we want and what we demand is justice.

AN OUNCE OF JUSTICE ADMINISTERED BY THE LAW WITH A JUDGE AND A JURY BEHIND IT IS WORTH ALL THE CHIVALRY IN THE WORLD.

Los Angeles Women Registering For Their First Election Day

BEING debarred from exercising their newly acquired right of suffrage at the November election because of the California law providing that registration must close thirty days before election day, the women of Los Angeles looked forward with enthusiasm to the election for city officers, set for Dec. 5, and registered for it in great numbers. The interest in the local contest between the good government and Socialist tickets was so keen that great efforts were made to bring out a large registration. Seventy-three thousand women registered as against 100,000 men. The Socialists established "voting schools" for women, instructing the new voters in the details of casting their ballots. Registration clerks attended prayer meetings in the various churches so as to insure the attendance at the polls of the "better element." All classes of women registered, many waiting their turn with babies in their arms and children by their sides.

TOOZE FAMILY MEETS AFTER FORTY YEARS

Probably one of the most unique celebrations of Thanksgiving Day in Oregon was the reunion of the Tooze family at the home of Superintendent of City Schools Fred J. Tooze, the youngest member of a family of twelve children, whose parents immigrated from Europe to Ohio in 1859 and to Michigan about four years later. The mother died when the youngest child was a few weeks old and the father shortly afterward, leaving ten small orphans to the care of strangers.

Of necessity these brothers and one sister were widely separated, several of them drifting to Ohio, where one-half brother still lives, two others, then stalwart young men, gave their lives to the Union cause in the Civil War. Walter L. and Charles Tooze came to Oregon more than thirty years ago with an uncle, who had come to America recently. Frank Tooze came two years later and was followed by two other half-brothers, John and William Rutson and by the sister. Three others, Henry, David and Fred J. remained in Michigan until two years ago when the latter came to Oregon City. The last to arrive here is David, who bears the adopted name Styles. Six of these children for the first time in forty years met in Oregon City at the home of Fred J. Tooze, Thanksgiving Day.

Those present were, Sadie Kemp, of Woodburn; John Rutson, Hillsdale; Frank Tooze, Sherwood; Walter L. Tooze, Falls City; D. C. Styles, Battle Creek, Mich.; the host and the wives of the brothers.

After a period of reminiscences a magnificent dinner, the result of the planning and work of the capable hostess, a short program, consisting of songs, guessing conundrums, short speeches by W. P. Tooze and others. P. M. Hart was called upon to photograph the jolly crowd.

ELWOOD.
When for homes a band of braves did seek
Upon a rock bound coast, midat winds to 30 black
Where ne're a foot had trodden before
Save the red man in his hunt along the shore.
No one to forewarn, or tell the dangers
They braved
Save experience, and those from the horrors saved,
Indians, disease and famine a seeking prey
Without implements to farm or invent.

Hayworth to Preach on Keeping Sabbath

Rev. S. A. Hayworth, pastor of the Baptist church, will preach the fifth of a series of sermons on "The Men and Religion Forward Movement" tonight. The minister will say that the righteous man is never elected by the masses of the people, but that the truly just was and is today rejected and crucified by the vulgar public. The prelude to the sermon will be on "Shall Lawlessness be Licensed in Oregon City on the Sabbath Day?" Mr. Hayworth said the sermon would have no bearing on either mayoralty candidate at the election tomorrow.

The Progress Edition of The Enterprise will contain facts and figures; stories on each of the substantial industries of Clackamas County, including:

Horticulture.
General Agriculture.
Dairying and Stock Breeding.
Vegetable and Truck Gardening.
Lumber.
Manufacturing.

Will also contain illustrated articles covering the Educational Facilities of County.

Climate conditions.
Increase in taxable wealth for past ten years.
Street improvements.
Transportation—including new railroads being projected and water transportation.
Articles from individual fruit and grain growers giving figures on production.
Illustrated writeups of each town in county.
Interviews with two score or more prominent business and professional men setting out in a concise way and in their own words, their impressions of Oregon City and Clackamas County and why they think it offers good opportunities for homemaking and investment.
Printed on a good quality of book paper in attractive magazine form, profusely illustrated, this handsome souvenir number will be one that you will be proud to mail to your eastern friends, as it will tell the story of life, progress and opportunity in Clackamas County forcefully and accurately.
The Commercial Club of Oregon City alone has arranged to mail 1500 copies East; the other commercial bodies of the county will doubtless make similar arrangements.
The fact that it will be circulated all over Clackamas County as a part of the regular edition of the Enterprise also makes it a splendid medium of local publicity.
The indications are that the progressive business firms not represented in this issue in some form will be about as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth.
Has your firm arranged for representation?
If not, telephone the Enterprise office and our solicitor will call on you and explain the plan in detail. DO IT NOW.
