GRAND OPERA THIS WEEK'S ATTRACTION

Plunged into grand opera, Portland is reveling in an unusual form of entertainment. It promises, too, to be one of the most successful seasons in years. As a rule Portland does not support grand opera as liberally as this class of amusement requires, but the good start received Thanksgiving day, when the two performances were crowded, sent forth hundreds of enthusiasts. There is just one verdict concerning the Lombardi company, and that is favorable. The organization can sing, and that is the chief requirement of grand opera. If a propitious costume, good looks, youth and scenic production can be added to the voices, they add just so much to the general pleasure; but grand opera is primarily a treat for the ear, and not for the eye.

To the ear, the Lombardi company meets every demand. No one, unless deaf, can sit through a rendition of an opera by this organization without becoming enthusiastic and applauding until gloves split. For months ahead of a grand opera season people begin making inquiries, but ordinarily their interest stops before the actual arrival of the company. So many patrons of the Hellig are now lauding the Lombardi company that the season looks like a money-maker. The program for this week follows: Tonight, "Thais," Monday "Faust," Tuesday "Thais," Wednesday matinee "Madame Butterfly," Wednesday night, "Carmen."

The Lombardi forces number among the list of principal artists, such celebrated singers as Desirée Alvin, the gifted dramatic soprano, of New York; Berli; Lidia Levy, of Florence, Italy; Elvira Rosetti, the eminent dramatic soprano and heroine of past Lombardi seasons; Elvira Casazza, the great mezzo soprano, late of La Scala, Milan, and Adalgisa Giana, soprano. Others to be heard here during the Hellig theatre engagement are Sig. Carlo Cortico, tenor. (last season with the Boston Grand Opera Company); Sig. Salvatore Sciarretti, tenor, late of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company; Senor Manuel Salazar, the eminent Spanish tenor; Angelo Antola and Michele Giovinetti, baritone; Giuseppe Maggi, the distinguished Italian baritone, famous for his triumphs as Athanor, in Massenet's sensational "Thais," Antonio Sabellico and Alceste Mori, basses.

DAVE LEWIS THIS WEEK.
Clever Comedian in His Latest Success, "Don't Lie to Your Wife."
Dave Lewis, who will be starred in "Don't Lie to Your Wife," under the direction of Rowland and Clifford, which comes to the Baker all next week, starting with the usual matinee, Sunday, will be seen as Amos Doubleday, a New Yorker, who is under the domination of a wife who has suffragette tendencies. She goes to Atlantic City and while she is away the husband goes out for a night of it with boon companions. They meet three chorus girls, are arrested for speeding and are finally landed at their flat after many exciting experiences. Later the wife and her friends show up unexpectedly while a gay party is in progress with the chorus girls, and the complications are many, but the men prove equal to the occasion and finally turn the tables on the women and the curtain goes down on a happy and reunited little coterie. Mr. Lewis is supported by a large company of expert farceurs, and the production contains all the brilliancy that featured the successful run at the Whitney Opera House in Chicago last season. Assisting Mr. Lewis will be Miriam Shelby, Edna Roland, Gladys Wilcox, Nellie Love, Virginia Stewart, Estelle Vernon, Lenora Frey, Sam Rose, Holworth Stark, Harry Ellis, Benton Garvin, Mart Franklin and Edward Spencer. Matinees also Wednesday (Bargain Day) and Saturday.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE

WHERE CHARITY BEGINS.
We have careful thoughts for the stranger And smiles for the sometime guest. But off for "our own."

The bitter tone. Though we love our own the best. —Margaret E. Sangster
The other evening in a certain city two small boys were heard sobbing in front of their home.

No one came until a neighbor went over and inquired the cause for grief. One answered: "We want to go into the house. It is so dark and cold here. But mother won't let us in because she is having a card party."

Doubtless the mother loves her own the best, but in her strange way of showing it she locked out her babes and reserved her smiles for the "some-time" guest.

It is often so. I know a traveling man who is home only on Sunday. On that day his wife and two daughters go to church and leave him to get his dinner.

He has been heard to remark that charity begins at home. And so does religion.

Of course neither charity nor religion ends at home, but that charmed circle is surely the beginning place for the exercise of both.

"The candle that shines farthest shines the brightest nearest home."
"How far that little candle—the home candle—throws its beams!"

We have Scripture warrant for the statement that he who provideth not for his own household has "denied the faith and is worse than an infidel." And—

Providing for a household means more than furnishing the bread and butter.

The sort of hospitality that shuts out its own to give careful thoughts for the stranger is not hospitality at all. It is refined cruelty. It does not even meet the definition of Herbert Spencer, who says that all action is fundamentally selfish.

The sort of religion that leads us to neglect and refuse our own in order to minister to the heathen abroad is not real religion.

Let us stand by our own. It is they who will stand by us when the others turn the cold shoulder and forget our benefits.

Selfish?
No. He who lives best and loves most in the little circle will live best and serve most in the wider circle.

He Talked Shop.
He was a railroad man and spoke mostly in railroad terms. He was the father of two boys. One day he invited the minister home to dinner. The hungry boys wanted to pitch in as usual, but the father in a stern voice cautioned them to wait. The minister bowed his head to return thanks. The boys, innocent of what was being done, began to eat before the blessing was half said. "Excuse me a minute," said the father, addressing the minister, "until I switch a few empties."
