MOVING PICTURES IN SCHOOL. We applaud the common sense of the San Francisco superintendent of schools. He recommends to his teachers the use of moving pictures in class instruction. The wonder is that this excellent means of education has been used so little in the public schools. It would be particularly helpful in geography. Scenery the occupations of people, the appearance of cities and so on could be taught through moving pictures a great deal better than by books. History is another branch where pictures would be extremely useful. It is difficult to convey the conception of a battle by words. By pictures it could be done easily and quickly. What is now a wearisome task to the young would thus be transformed to a pleasure. Great historic scenes could be forever fixed in the memory if they were exhibited by films. The possibilities of the device are limitless. The conservatism which prevents its introduction in the schools is unpardonable. Perhaps the educational authorities would give more attention to moving pictures if it were not for the capital invested in text books. United States history could be taught to children from pictures in half the time and with not a tenth part of the wear which it now demands, but the books which are conned in order to learn it would become, in part at least, superfluous. When the events could be seen in actual process of happening it would not be necessary to describe them in a book. Geographies would go to the same road and so would many other text books. This would of course lessen the profits of certain investments and we may expect the influence of the textbook publishers to be hostile to the innovation. They have not so much to say about the conduct of the schools in Oregon as they had years ago, but their influence is still potent in a quiet way and we may be certain that it will not be favorable to moving pictures. No doubt we shall be told that education must not be made too easy and attractive or its disciplinary effect upon the child's mind will be lost.

TONGUE AND LEVINGS DENOUNCE EACH OTHER

addressing himself to Tongue, "that many witnesses went before the grand jury at a personal sacrifice and from a sense of duty and they testified on oath what they believed to be true. You argued every point with them and belittled every material bit of testimony. You could not have taken up the cudgel better for Harvey had you held a brief from him. Witnesses came from the grand jury room and complained that you had cast aspersions on their testimony. You have said that not a scintilla of evidence was presented to the grand jury to connect Harvey with the crime. I want to ask you who has spent their time, money and mental effort to find the real murderer and I want you to draw a comparison for the benefit of this court as to who has really tried to get to the bottom of this case. I believe the grand jury would have returned an indictment had it been properly instructed." "You have been working hard on this case and you fell down and now you are sore," rejoined Mr. Tongue. "In that, I have a shade the best of it, for I have tried and you have not," rejoined Levings. "I never heard testimony that was testimony in this case before the grand jury," said the District Attorney. Levings handed me a typewritten outline of the testimony he had obtained and on things he claimed were material, witnesses passed him the direct hit. The District Attorney stands ready to go to any length to get the murderer of the Hill family, but I have been made a goat long enough by Levings' press agents." With this statement from Mr. Tongue the conference was concluded, having reached no tangible point. The attitude of the District Attorney, if maintained, makes it imperative to obtain more conclusive evidence than has already been presented before Mr. Tongue will recommend an indictment. George C. Brownell, attorney for Harvey, said Saturday night his client was anxious to go before a jury. "Mr. Harvey and myself are both anxious to meet a jury in this case," said Mr. Brownell. "My client is innocent, and this whole business has been worked up by detectives, politicians and two or three lying neighbors of Harvey. I personally am acquainted with the testimony the state possesses and there is none of it admissible in court, except a few minor circumstances. "I am preparing papers to commence action against two or three persons in Milwaukee and Redwald, who have slandered my client."

The UNDERWOOD introduced typewriter bookkeeping and the use of the typewriter for special accounting, recording and statistical purposes. There are over a score of special model Underwoods for special uses. Many corporations use four times as many UNDERWOODS for accounting work as for correspondence.
