Famous Gainsborough Which Mr. Morgan Will Bring to America

HE announcement that the collections of J. Pierpont Morgan now housed in London-or, at any rate, a large part of them-are to be brought to this country and placed on exhibition in the Metropolitan museum in New York is of the greatest moment to art lovers in the United States. The value of the paintings, jewels, bronzes, porcelains, etc., in question is variously estimated at from $5,000,000 to $15,000,000. Among the paintings of which mention is made is the famous Gainsborough portrait of the Duchess of Devonshire, now in the National gallery, London, which was stolen nearly forty years ago and was eventually restored to its owner through the mediation of an American, Pat Sheedy, "the honest gambler," after its whereabouts had been unknown for twenty-five years. Mr. Morgan bought the picture for $150,000.

The Perspective of Light.

Velasquez recognized that light is elastic and illuminates the air; hence he was the first to discover a new kind of perspective. Men long ago had learned to make lines vanish from the eye, to make the figures diminish in size and shape as they recede from the front and to explain the distance by contrasts of light and shade. But he discovered the perspective of light. By the most delicate rendering of the quantity of light reflected from each and every part of the room and the figures and objects in it he has given to the latter the reality of form and to the room its appearance of hollowness and distance

Pudding Wives.

-St. Nicholas.

The name of pudding wives was given to women who were occasionally employed in some English monasteries for making pastry and delicacies that call for the deft touch of a feminine hand. They were engaged by or with the consent of the regular cook of the monastery and had a house or cham ber in which to work near the kitchen called the pudding house. When animals were slaughtered, especially when pigs were killed, about St Martin's day, these women's services were required to make black puddings; hence the name pudding wives. They were called in, too, for the making of pastry on special occasions. - London Globe
