THE VALENTINE STATE

Because it was admitted on February 14 Arizona is to bear the name of the Valentine State. Its officials sought to have its entrance take place on February 12, so as to have it coincide with the Lincoln birthday anniversary, but it seems to have been impracticable for the president to sign the proclamation on that day, and the matter went over to the 14th. While as a nickname the Lincoln state would have been preferable to its present designation the latter will be acceptable. The fact of admission is the large consideration, and this comes after many years of endeavor on the part of its leading citizen.

Arizona has one distinction which will be likely to cling to it. It is the last of the states of the continental contiguous sections of the country. The whole region from the Gulf of Mexico and the Mexican Republic up to the Dominion of Canada is now organized into self-governing units. The roll of states comprises forty-eight names, and none is likely to be added to the list until the twentieth century is well in years. Under the terms in which it was admitted in 1845 Texas is permitted to divide itself into four other states, but as the permission of its own people as well as the permission of Congress will have to be obtained before any division of any sort can take place, nobody now alive is likely to see the dimensions of that big commonwealth curtailed. Its people believe that some day it will be the empire state in the number of its inhabitants, and perhaps that hope is justified.

Where will the forty-ninth and the fiftieth states come from? Perhaps from Alaska and Porto Rico. Alaska has much more than double the area of Texas. It would make twelve states of the dimensions of New York. But Alaska's population is small, being only 64,000. Some wards in New York City have more people than are in the entire province of Alaska. Moreover, its gain is slow. But this will improve as the facilities for bridging as magnificent distances increase. Some day Alaska will probably furnish several states, but necessarily that day is a long way in the future. Porto Rico is a candidate for statehood, but a full territorial government, with complete

American citizenship for its people, will come first. Possibly Hawaii will enter statehood sometime. For many decades, however, Arizona, will hold the honor of being the youngest entrant into the circle of the commonwealths.

Idaho, Nevada, Wyoming, Montana, Utah and Florida are looking into their phosphate deposits. While not as exciting as a gold rush this move may be more profitable.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE

YOUR BOY. This is a serious talk to parents concerning the boy—the common, everyday garden variety of boy. He is a great institution. He is bigger than factory or farm or business because he has in him the making of a man, and a man is the biggest thing in the universe.

Shall the boy be a man or a thing? There is a lot of good in the average boy. He is inclined to be trustful, and he has a keen sense of justice. His heart is wide open to an appeal to manliness, and he wants to do his best. Good material out of which to manufacture manliness. But— If you would get the best out of him believe in him, not make believe, or he will find you out. If you believe in him he will believe in you—which is your starting point. And if you really believe in him you will not scold him nor find fault. That sort of treatment brings the lad, not the good, out of him. To get at the heart of him foster his natural desire to do his best by encouragement.

Because— He will grow into the likeness of that which he desires to do or be. Stimulate his desire to be or do, and he will come to his fruition naturally, as a flower grows. Even flowers must be encouraged. Cheer him on. If he tends to some bad habit change his surroundings. Association has everything to do in the making or unmaking of a boy. Get him into the right sort of company, change his activities, and the bad habits will disappear by disuse. Do not do too much for him. Be careful along this line. If you do too much he will do nothing for himself. Which is fatal. He must learn to do things by doing them—by experience.

Be very firm, but very kind. Remember that he is in the making. Treat him fairly, but justly—remember, very justly. As he grows older appeal to his pride to get on in the world. Get his confidence and hold on to it. Give impulse to his ambition. Keep him in the straight path. Common sort of advice? Yes, common, but many a parent is trying to force his boy or to neglect him and then scold him into manliness. It cannot be done.

Why He Doubted the Map. At a St. Andrew's society dinner one of the speakers told of a Scotch gardener, recently landed, who had great difficulty in acquiring a knowledge of American geography. The son of the household, failing to teach the gardener in any other way, brought out a huge, highly colored map. The Scot looked at it critically. "Ah, yes, lad; that may be, but it's no to be trusted. It's laid out in the plaid of the leen' MacFechtions," was his comment.

American Merchants Are the Cleverest

YOUR stores, like your theaters, have each an individuality. For instance, there is the comedy theater and the playhouse for drama and tragedy. You have a store with an atmosphere of solidity and another which is like a variety theater in its appearance and merchandise. Even the people of these stores, clerks and customers, seem to REFLECT THIS DISTINCTION. The theory of trade here seems to be to flood the market as often as possible with goods of a low market value. I do not mean cheap goods, but low prices, to the consumer. We keep the price STABLE and assure the manufacturer of constant employment for his hands. THE MEN RUNNING LARGE DEPARTMENT STORES IN AMERICA IMPRESS ONE FAR MORE THAN THE STORES. ALTHOUGH THEY ARE VERY BUSY AND ARE BIG MEN, THEY ARE THE KINDEST MERCHANTS I HAVE EVER SEEN, AND THE CLEVEREST. THEY NEVER SEEM TO FORGET HOW TO TREAT PEOPLE IN THEIR SHOPS. I THINK THIS IDEA OF PLEASING THE BUYER PERSONALLY IS THE KEY OF THEIR SUCCESS.

A Messenger From President Lincoln

By DANIEL TRUMAN

During the critical period of 1861 when Mr. Lincoln was cut off from the north in Washington I was asked to carry a message by the president to New York. "Here is a letter," he said, "which I would like you to take to the governor of New York, or if you can't get through to New York and can go to Harrisburg deliver it to the governor of Pennsylvania. I believe there are more militia ready to come from New York than anywhere else; therefore I prefer that you should go there. The letter gives the appalling condition of things here, and coming from me, it would never do for it to fall into the hands of the secessionists. I must therefore ask you to protect it with your life and if taken by southern sympathizers destroy it if possible." "Mr. President," I said, "I shall carry out your order to the best of my ability."

I succeeded in getting a train that took me to Baltimore and, not being known in any way connected with the government, had no trouble in getting through the city. It was at Havre de Grace that I met with danger. The secessionists had burned the railway bridge over the Susquehanna river, and there was no way of getting across except in rowboats.

There was a secret patrol by secessionists on both shores who made it their business to see that no one in the interest of the government got across. Pretending to be a rabid opponent of the "black Republican government," as it was then called, I walked up and down the southern bank of the river, ostensibly watching for those who were on business for the troops trying to make their way to Washington. Seeing a boat coming, I called upon several men of the volunteer patrol, saying: "Here comes a boat with several men in it. The one in the stern with a silk hat on looks like a railway official I know and a northern man. He may be working to open the road. Let's see."

We met the boat when it landed, and I straightway accused the man I had mentioned of being an assistant superintendent of the railroad. He denied the charge, but I said I knew him to be what I stated and proposed to my backers that we take him back and put him ashore on the northern side. I was so earnest and positive in the matter that those about me were ready to do anything I suggested, and, allowing the others to land, we got into the boat and pulled for the northern shore. On arriving there I jumped out and told the others to hold the man till I could find some of "our" patrolmen to take charge of and investigate him. I ran up the bank, looked about me, then, as though I saw what I was after, walked rapidly away from the river. That was the last the boat's owner or the poor fellow I had used to gain

A Fighting Bishop. On one occasion Bishop Selwyn was going down the river Waikato with a Maori when the latter, who was very lazy, left off paddling the canoe. At the same time muttering that if Selwyn were not a bishop he would—well, "go for him." In a moment the bishop told the man to turn the canoe ashore, where, stripping himself of everything episcopal, he said, pointing to his robes, etc.: "The bishop lives there; the man is here. I am quite ready. Come on." The Maori did not "come on," however, but quietly resumed his work without another murmur.—London Tit-Bits.
