DILLMAN QUILTS MILL TO BECOME FARMER

S. O. Dillman has left the employ of the Willamette Pulp & Paper Company after having been connected with that firm for the past seventeen years. He came to this city from Stockton, Cal. in 1895, where he had been connected with the California Paper Company. Mr. Dillman will give his attention to his fruit farm at Mount Pleasant where he has seventeen and one half acres. A large part of the farm is set to young bearing trees and strawberries.

Mr. Dillman has worked in almost every department of the pulp plant on the west side and has been promoted from time to time, holding when he left the company's employ the position of night superintendent of the Pulp mill.

FARMERS HOLD ONIONS FOR BETTER PRICES

In both the potato and onion markets the trend of values is upward, and that good prices will be obtained for what remains of the 1911 crop in both lines is practically assured. For both commodities the demand has stiffened materially since the first of the month and beyond doubt the heeds of the Southern markets during the next few months will be sufficient to absorb all the Oregon stock available.

For extra quality Burbank potatoes buying for the distant markets are now paying $1.60 to $1.75 a hundred at country shipping points, and are taking all the stock of that sort they are able to obtain at these figures. For the best potatoes the San Francisco market is still the principal outlet. Ordinary to good grade stock for the most part goes to Arizona, New Mexico and Texas.

In many instances the farmers are said to be holding for better prices than are now offered, and some, it is said, would let go at $2. There are, however, enough sellers at going prices to give the market a fairly active appearance, and at these figures the profit to the producer is held to be a fair one.

In the onion market the situation for the time is even stronger than in the case of potatoes. The latest report says there are now only about 35 acres of the crop now remaining in growers' hands, a very meager showing for this stage of the season, in the face of the strong and steadily growing demand. The selling price on association stock, which comprises the bulk of holdings in the state, has been raised to $3 a hundred, and at that figure the market is firm in tone.

Latest reports from Texas say that the Bermuda crop of that state this year will be in the market about 20 days later than usual, and in view of this there is no question whatever of a clean-up of Oregon stock before offerings of any consequence from the south are available.

Winifred Stoner, Pittsburgh Prodigy, Is Nine Years Old

TO the list of precocious prodigies which includes William James Sidis and Norbert Wiener, both sons of Harvard professors, must now be added Winifred Sackville Stoner, a nine-year-old girl of Pittsburgh. Her mother says that the child is proficient in a number of languages, talks intelligently on mythology, history, literature, geography and art and has published three books. Yet, according to the same authority, she is "only a simple child who loves her playmates and dolls as well as her books." The child's phenomenal progress in the acquisition of knowledge is said to have been made through the medium of play. "Every child," says Mrs. Stoner, "has a talent. It is the duty of parents to discover this talent and nourish it so that it will bear good fruit. With concentration and observation implanted early in any child's mind I believe that child will succeed in some line."

DICTAGRAPH TRAPS DARROW IS REPORT

INDIANAPOLIS, March 12.—That Clarence Darrow, chief counsel for the McNamara, indicted on a charge of bribing the McNamara jury, was trapped by the dictagraph, is the statement here by Walter Drew, counsel for the National Erectors' Association. Drew declares that the dictagraphs recorded conversations between Darrow and John R. Harrington, counsel associated with Darrow, which will be used in the trials here of the alleged dynamiters. He says that a dictagraph in the room in the hotel at Los Angeles occupied by Harrington recorded conversations relative to Darrow's defense.

Frowns Versus Smiles. It is one of the incongruities of the beauty search that women will spend the greater part of an hour before their glass, attempting to aid nature in her good intentions and conceal her little malices, only to destroy the whole carefully built structure by frowns and grimaces.

This futile attempt at facial art is like valding an exquisite picture with an air of heaviness and foreboding, painting it in wonderful colors and then drawing across the fair surface harsh black lines. Streak the greatest masterpiece with dark pencil marks, dim its luster with a dull gray atmosphere, and it becomes a thing of ugliness, without value and without charm.

The face is nature's canvas of beauty upon which she spreads the colors of her palette according to the wisdom of the owner. She does her best, and if we choose to mar the result with wrinkled brow, deep furrows and fine lines the blame should be placed where it rightfully belongs. Notice that nine business women out of every ten force two deep frown lines between the eyebrows. This is done in a mistaken effort to appear serious, perhaps to give an impression of deep thought and mental gymnastics. As a matter of fact, it succeeds only in creating an air of extreme unrest. No conversation, business or social, is impressive unless accompanied by perfect harmony and poise. Frowns are not indicative of great mentality, as all the world is aware brains are not dependent upon facial contortions.

These frown lines often come from a constant state of worry. They are the outward and visible signs of the trouble borrows, the people who carry an umbrella no matter how sunny the skies. One girl of extraordinary beauty spoiled the whole effect of her perfect contour and coloring by frowning a deep ugly line just above the bridge of her nose. No amount of massage or electrical treatment availed in the eradication of this disfigurement, for no sooner would the line begin to grow dim than she would return to the old habit.

Long lines across the brow, the result of elevating the eyebrows to assist in conversation, is a common mistake against which too much cannot be said. These seams continue to grow deeper with each year until they become fixed and dark, carrying with them the appearance of age and anxiety. By all means massage them with a good cold cream, using a rotary movement, and then practice talking minus the eyebrow accompaniment before your mirror, say, a half hour at a time. Persistence in this treatment will bring about its abandonment. Be careful not to draw the eyes into unnatural lines when laughing.

Wrinkle Removers. Rubber bands for removing wrinkles in the forehead are being tried by many women, who are enthusiastic over the success they have had. The bands are flat and shaped to fit the forehead, having a small point extending down in front over the nose. Before adjusting the band the forehead should be rubbed with cold cream and a little of the same cream smeared over the inside of the rubber strip. Then it should be fastened in place by means of tapes. If the rubber beautifier is too tight a headache may result. It should be remembered that the virtue of such an appliance lies in its heating properties. After the band has been worn a little while the inside becomes coated with perspiration, which helps to cause the wrinkles to disappear. The rubber piece should be cleansed carefully after it is used each time by wiping off the cold cream with a cloth. The forehead should also be given further treatment with dashes of cold water to restore the circulation and close the pores of the skin.

Treatment For Oily Scalp. An oily scalp is bad for the hair. When it falls from illness it is a sure sign that the glands are distended, and the hair which grows in tiny tubes and through which the oil runs to feed and nourish it cannot drink it up as fast as it exudes from the pores; therefore it oozes out on the surface of the scalp and becomes mingled with the hair, making it greasy and heavy. The hair itself is overfed, becomes rotten and falls. Never be tempted to give the hair a dry shampoo. No powder was ever made that can take the place of a good soap jelly and water to shampoo with. Besides, the powders close the pores, thereby creating an unhealthy condition, for no matter how the hair may be brushed after the powder application, some will remain.

For the Parted Coiffure. Now that the parted coiffure is fashionable and women whose hair is either thin or gray on top are despairing about ever being able to adopt the modish headdress experts are preparing false pieces to cover up such deficiencies and signs of age. Little caps or flat sections are made of mi lady's combings and worn on top of the head. These are constructed on a very fine net, with a realistic part, and are held in place by fine wire hairpins just the color of the hair or by tiny shell combs. They are easy to adjust and cannot be detected when worn with a carefully arranged coiffure.
