In a recent issue of the Oregonian was an editorial on Colonists of a type which Oregon cannot have too many, people who do not practically prefer to stay in town. The ones referred to seem to have had definite plans, before leaving their Eastern homes and on arrival showed great anxiety to settle down and commence work.

This editorial further stated: "We shall be glad to chronicle the arrival of such settlers in any section of the state. They are the kind of people that Oregon needs and the kind that need Oregon, since they will find a wide and varied field for their endeavor."

"Let a man come to Oregon with his family having a definite location and purpose in view and with means enough to settle himself, even in a small way, in his chosen vocation, and he will be from the first a satisfied and useful citizen."

We will add to the above that this is the class of people for whom our city and county are advertising; to whom we extend our offer of "come and do likewise," whether he be farmer, mechanic or laborer. We are not asking for the aimless wanderer who expects something for nothing. We want workers for a lazy man will never be satisfied here. Oregon City and Clackamas County through the Commercial Club extend to people of the first type mentioned all that can be pictured in advertising matter, but to the man without plans and ambition we cannot offer much encouragement.

When Col. Bryan intimated to the Democratic politicians that he was not much of a coffee drinker he did not mean to convey the impression that he would never pass his cup again.

Senor de la Barra, formerly provisional president of Mexico, now residing in Paris, praises the "high sentiment of justice dominating the attitude toward Mexicans of the people and the government of the United States."

Seven different candidates for president are maintaining headquarters at Washington. Running for office is getting to be one of our national pastimes.

INTERVENTION IN MEXICO EXPECTED

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico, March 15.—In the belief that a decisive battle between rebels and federals soon is likely, and that it will be fought at Torreon, Mexico, 3000 refugees, mostly women and children, are en route north from that place. Most of them departed on trains Wednesday.

Two coaches were crowded with Chinamen who fear a repetition of the massacres that marked the Madro revolution. Freight service at Chihuahua from Juarez was suspended temporarily today and all available equipment at Juarez was sent south of Chihuahua, presumably to be used in moving the rebel army from here.

The rebel garrison in Juarez was paid today from funds taken from Chihuahua.

Although order here the city, in respect to its foreign interests, is but a ghost of its former thriving self. But a handful of foreigners remain. Practically every woman and child has been sent to the safety of American soil. The exodus of Mexicans has been great. A year ago few Americans thought it necessary to send out even the women and children.

A year ago foreigners generally were opposed to talk of intervention. By word and deed they used every effort to discharge the spread of such sentiment. Today they are a unit in declaring that intervention must come sooner or later.

ST. PATRICK

ST. PATRICK AND THE KING'S DAUGHTERS BY NEIL MACDONALD Copyright by American Press Association, 1912.

The following composition is an epitomized metrical translation of an ancient story of the days of the Irish saint. The story, extant in a Gaelic manuscript of great antiquity, was generally accepted as a true account of an event which happened in the life of St. Patrick.

SOON after the dawn of a summer day, Ere the rising sun had illumed his way, St. Patrick went from the hall of the king To the Crochan slopes and the Clebach spring. As his brethren and he, to rest and pray, By the spring sat down, from a wooded way There approached two maidens of beauty rare— Fidelon, the winsome, and Ethne, the fair.

THEIR father, Loeguire, reigned in regal state In Tara's halls, where the saint of late Had preached and baptized, and his daughters came To confer with the man of saintly fame; For, sorely perplexed by what he had said, For light and guidance they earnestly prayed, But as sunny beams fell across their path With terror they thought of the sun god's wrath.

BAPTIZED by the saint in the holy names, The Druid's belief still their minds inflames, And they wanted proof that the Christian's creed Was true and supplied the soul's ev'ry need. St. Patrick, benignant, with modest air, Inquired how it fared with the royal pair, And they answered that doubts their minds possessed; That to live was pain while by fears oppressed.

"SHOW us the God you would have us receive," The sisters exclaimed, "and we will believe That the triune God is the God supreme— That your faith is not a fatuous dream." St. Patrick replied, "With your parting breath And after you pass the valley of death You will have your wish, but the face divine May appear in the eucharist bread and wine."

"WE want to believe and the One divine Would see though we cross the dividing line 'Twixt the life that is and the life to be, Where from earth and its doubts our souls are free." And the sisters, after the eucharist, Had their prayers granted, had what they wisht, For they passed away in rapturous dreams To the land where the triune Glory gleams.

BE CHEERFUL. Tribulation is a habit. Be brave and utter a cheerful word in place of the complaining one. Keeping silent in an atmosphere of discord attracts to you peace and serenity instead of pain and sorrow. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." No greater truth was ever uttered. As soon as a person stops thinking trouble and goes to thinking joy then joy will materialize.

THE HARP OF ERIN By THOMAS MOORE. THE harp that once through Tara's halls The soul of music shed Now hangs as mute on Tara's walls As if that soul were fled. So sleeps the pride of former days, So glory's thrill is o'er, And hearts that once beat high for praise Now feel that pulse no more.

FACTS ABOUT ST. PATRICK. The birthplace of St. Patrick has been a disputed point among the numerous biographers of the Irish saint. The advantage of numbers, though, perhaps, not of evidence, has been on the side of those who claim that he was born about the year 372 in Armore Gaul (modern Brittany), near the site of the city of Boulogne. In the saint's confessions, written in Latin about the middle of the seventh century by Adins, bishop of Sletty, and now preserved in the celebrated "Book of Armagh," are statements which conflict with the above view. St. Patrick in his confessions distinctly states that after being freed from slavery in Ireland he returned to his parents in Britain. The Romans had long occupied the region where he was born, and in his confessions he gives his birthplace his Roman designation of "Bannavel Taberniae," which may be identified with Kirkpatrick, near Glasgow, or, with greater probability still, with Pari Patrick, on the Ayrshire coast, opposite Ireland and a short sail removed from it. The claim of patrician Roman descent advanced on the saint's behalf, does not appear to have a more substantial foundation in fact than that supporting his birth in ancient France.
