Not Flattering.
Jim—Have a cigar, George. They say there are more than a million and a half brands of cigars made. George (sampling the gift)—Funny it should be just your luck to pick this one.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Between Doctors.
"What did you talk about at the last medical meeting?"
"Nitrates."
"Well, they ought to be higher. It's worth something to leave a warm bed."
—Washington Herald.

Signs of a Winner.
"Does your wife win at bridge?"
"I don't know for sure," replied Mr. Meekton, "but I think so. The women all look as if they disliked her very much, but they keep on inviting her to play."
—Washington Star.

TAFT LAUDED AND COLONEL SCORED

Tariff To Be Settled.

Mr. Fulton said that Taft was the only President who realized the importance of settling the tariff question in a business way. His tariff commission, the speaker declared, would see that the interests of all the people were subserved when the schedules were prepared. There would be no haphazard work in the future.

"I admire the independence shown by the President in his appointments to the judiciary," said Mr. Fulton. "Regardless of party or personal interests he selected the man he thought best for the position. This is as it should be. He named Mr. Justice White a Democrat, Chief Justice, because he knew him to be the best man for the place."

"But one of his greatest achievements has been in the line of securing universal peace. The president, who preceded him, however, does not agree with Mr. Taft. He seems for some reason to think that Taft's policy is impracticable and undesirable. He seems to think the spirit of patriotism would be wiped out if wars were eliminated and peace reigned. I do not think so."

"I do not believe in modern times we have had a man who sizes up with Mr. Taft in all respects. His predecessor has forced himself in the ring. He is a candidate of his own volition and suggestion. As he said he has 'thrown his hat into the ring,' and has followed it."

"I regret to feel that Roosevelt's position in history will not be so large or great as it would have been had he not been guided by a vaulting ambition, but by patriotism. But he has exhibited to the country that self-aggrandizement and ambition are dearer to him than his country. He is willing to destroy sacred legends and convictions to advance only his personal ambition. But no man however great, however deserving shall serve more than two terms as President. It is a belief and a tradition founded on the wisest statesmanship. Washington foresaw the danger, and though urged to be a candidate for a third term declined. He feared a monarchical Jefferson could have been nominated for a third term, but he declined."

The speaker to illustrate how indelibly the idea was fixed in the minds of the American people called attention to the mistake that was made in the case of General Grant. The hero of his country, the man idolized by all, led by unwise friends to try for a third term was beaten though every man in the convention loved him, said Mr. Fulton. With such a man unable to overcome popular sentiment on the subject the speaker drew the inference that Roosevelt, too, must fail.

"History will repeat itself again," continued Mr. Fulton, "so long as the fire of patriotism burns within, the American breast. I sincerely regret that Mr. Roosevelt has allowed ambition to overcome his sense of patriotism. It is the duty of every citizen who loves his country, who has its interests at heart to assist in guiding the ship of state from the rocks."
Mr. Fulton quoted statements of Roosevelt, in which he said he would not be a candidate for another term, or a candidate in 1912, and illustrated by them how the Ex-President's mind had gradually drifted from what he had once believed to be the right course.

Geer Opposes Roosevelt.
Ex-Governor Geer who chanced to be in the city, and was not scheduled for an address, said:

"No man has been so big in the past, no man is so big at present and no man ever will be so big in the history of this country that his services will be demanded as its chief executive for a third term."

"Four years ago I was an ardent advocate of the nomination of Taft not only on account of his splendid record in various capacities he had served the public but because he was recommended by President Roosevelt whom I admired greatly, as the best equipped man who had ever aspired to the presidency of the United States. In those days Roosevelt's judgment was better than it seems to be at the present time and Mr. Taft has not only made good, but he has proved himself a wonderfully clear-minded President, entirely devoid of a tendency toward hysterics and a safe counselor for the common people."

FRUITGROWERS TO MEET AT MOUNT PLEASANT

A. C. Goodrich, commissioner of the First District of Horticulture Board, and O. E. Freytag, county fruit inspector of Clackamas County, will be at the Assembly Hall in the Mount Pleasant schoolhouse Monday evening. Mr. Goodrich will talk on spraying and pruning of the fruit trees.

EAGLES TO MEET

Oregon City Aerle, No. 993, Fraternal order of Eagles will initiate candidates Monday night at Eagle's hall. Refreshments will be served.

FINE MUSIC TO BE GIVEN AT CHURCH TONIGHT

Several members of the Philharmonic orchestra, with R. V. D. Johnston at the Pipe Organ, will give Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," and Schuman's "Traumeri," together with a Wagnerian number at the Congregational church tonight. The choir will sing an anthem. The service will be the regular evening worship with a sermon by the pastor.

The terse, to-the-point preaching, reinforced by many years of intimacy with "Man in the making" is attracting many to the evening sermon. The instrumentalist will be Gustav Flechner, violin; T. A. Sager, Cornet; Arnold Kohler, Flute and E. S. Follansbee, bass.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

THE ART OF KINDNESS.

It is the history of kindness which alone makes the world tolerable. If it were not for that, for the effect of kind words, multiplying, spreading, making one happy through another and bringing forth benefits, some thirty, some sixty, some a thousand fold, I should be tempted to think our life a practical jest.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Your friend or neighbor has fallen in some enterprise or slipped a cog somewhere or lost his job. He is hungry for a little sympathy, though too proud to show it.

Your disapproval will only add salt to his wound.

An acquaintance has committed an error of which he is ashamed. He did wrong, but will you help him on or turn him down?

Be big and help him.

By turning a deaf ear and an unsympathetic heart toward your wayward brother or sister you betray your smallness and harden your heart.

God radiates and uplifts; great souls are Godlike. Can you fancy a pitiless God who sneers at the human who falls or fails? No more can a good human soul do that—

When all this sad world needs is just the art of being kind.

Here is where most of us miss it—falling in the minor ministries of everyday sympathy. Thoughtfulness, gentleness, an encouraging smile, a word fitly spoken—the kindness of little things is often forgotten in our selfish heedlessness.

This is a good habit: Never let a day pass without making some one happier.

It may be a cheering word to some hard struggler or a smile to a child or an inquiry about a sick friend or a few flowers.

Trifles?

They are expressions of love, and love is the greatest thing in the world. 'Troubles of your own' It will help some to lay a kindly hand on the weary shoulder of another. A touch of kindness is like a rubber ball—it bounces back.

Talk happiness. The world is sad enough without your woes. No path is wholly rough.

Look for the places that are smooth and clear.

And speak of these to rest the weary ear of earth, so hurt by one continuous strain of human discontent and grief and pain.

Rev. Hayworth will deliver his final sermons to the congregation today and next Sunday, March 24. Next Thursday evening he will deliver an address entitled, "The Bright Side of A Minister's Life." This lecture will set forth the claims of the ministry upon young men, as a calling, compared with other professions.
