Who ruled in 1907? Oh, if there had only been in the White House then a man of the type of old Hickory. Seventy years before, Nicholas Biddle told President Jackson that he must not destroy the United States bank and that he must renew its charter, and if he did not be, Nicholas Biddle, would financially wreck the country. The above is a gown of white French batiste suitable for wear on early spring trips in the south. The kimono blouse has a straight fichu effect composed of a band of eyelet embroidery bordered on either side by insertions of lace. This band is square turned in the back as to form a sailor collar. The embroidery and lace trim the sleeves. The skirt is a plain three gored one with the lace arranged in overskirt effect on the upper portion and from the knees down are four scant ruffles cut in scallops and edged with lace.

WHEN CATCHER LIVINGSTON FAILED TO INCREASE HIS BANK ACCOUNT.

Paddy Livingston, Cleveland catcher, couldn't be considered wealthy by any means, but he well remembers a time when he failed to increase his bank account merely because he wouldn't pick up $37 which was lying on the field waiting for him.

Paddy caught the first game of a double header in which Bull Durham performed in 1908. Indianapolis won the game by virtue of a lousy clot delivered by Paddy in the ninth inning. The fans, enthused by the great hit which the Indians were making for the American association pennant, tossed money on the field. Livingston watched the flow of coin for a moment, then liked for the clubhouse.

"Ain't you going to gather the coin?" one of his teammates shouted. "Not me," Paddy hurried back.

There was a reason. Just a short time before Bill Flopke had won a game for the Indians in a similar manner. He collected with bat in hand until reaching the bleachers.

"Why don't you get a monkey and grind organ?" one wild eyed bug screeched.

That's why Paddy didn't collect. Durham did, and the "collection" amounted to $37.

NO JONES IN AMERICAN.

Common Baseball Name Missing in Roster of Players This Season. Baseball experts have discovered that for the first time in the history of the American league that organization seems likely to go through a season without a single player of the name of Jones.

Davy Jones of the Detroit Tigers and Tex Jones of the Chicago White Sox are the sole survivors. Both are said to be likely to spend the season on minor league teams. Four or five years ago Jones was a prominent name in baseball. There were Fielder Jones, famous leader of the world's champion White Sox; Davy Jones, considered the fastest runner in baseball; Charley Jones, one of the mainstays in the Washington outfield; Tom Jones, veteran of the St. Louis infield, and Bumpus Jones, pitcher for the Tigers.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE

IN HALF AN HOUR.

In-half an hour you can Toss a pleasant joke to half a score of persons and lighten their daily task or help some youngster do his difficult sum or lift him over some barrier.

You can hold friendly converse with some discouraged neighbor, or write a postal card to some lonely one, or mail a message of fraternal greeting.

You can speak the little word in season to your wife or husband to shorten the weary day and bring the often smile or get in touch with the optimism of nature and give yourself an impetus for the duties of the morrow.

You can read a page or two of Tennyson or Ruskin or Hugo or the other masters and think their thoughts and feel the beat of their emotions after them.

You can relax your tired nerves and strong bent energies and while resting link yourself with the infinite forces that make for strength and righteousness.

All this you can do—and more—in one short half hour.

In one half hour you can move among your fellows with no glorious morning face or word of cheer or you can speak the words that smart and scorch and sting the heart of a friend like the cruel blow of a whiplash.

You can write a message of meanness to one who should be dear to you and fill his hours with bitterness and with sadness, or you can withhold the smile you owe to your own and cloud the skies you should try to clear.

You can slight the sunlight and breeze and flowers and birds and live like a stranger in your own world, or you can live without rest or relaxation from incessant labors and strain to the snapping point the delicate threads of life.

You can read that which is only for the moment and fill your mind with mental trash or that which is vicious and fill your hours with moral filth, or you can push some fellow mortal whose feet have missed the way farther down the road to ruin.

The half hour is yours. What will you do?
