Numerical Songs To make even the sobersides of the company shout with laughter try numerical songs. This is where all the company are gathered in a circle or in two rows and where some familiar song is sung, each phrase of which is punctuated with numbers, which are sung also, as if they belonged to the text. A certain number of words may be agreed upon as the space to be punctuated thus, say four or five words, and this division used instead of dividing the verses into phrases. Some song must be selected which all know, and it must be sung slowly and solemnly, like a dirge. Thus:

John Brown's body (One) lies a-moldering (Two) in the grave (Three); His soul (Four) goes marching on (Eive) One player may sing a verse as a solo, or two or more may sing it in unison, while all join in the chorus.

The Iltis is the name of the land ship which has been built and which has a crew of 120 boys. The larger boys act as officers. When they are at work on the land ship the boys dress in middy blouses and caps. There is gun practice on the land ship every day and a naval drill, and all the usual work of a ship is done by the boys. They have the greatest fun in climbing the spars and boisting the sails, and life on the Iltis is so popular that there are always more applicants for the crew than there are places to be filled.
