KNIGHTS OF KING ARTHUR HAVE DEBATE

The Knights of King Arthur met at the Presbyterian church Friday evening, and transacted important business. There was a large attendance and much enthusiasm was manifested. One of the features was a debate, the question being "Resolved, that Universal Peace would be Beneficial to the World." The subject was hotly debated. The decision was for the negative. Those debating on the negative side were Charles Beattie, Kent Wilson, and August Matheson, while on the affirmative were Clark Story, Ray Morris and LaBrot Edwards. After the debate the a supper was served by the women in the church parlors. The tables were prettily decorated. The supper was in honor of the birthdays of Clyde Green and Kent Wilson, and also was in the nature of a farewell for Clark Story, who leaves the first of next month with his mother for California, where the will live.

Members attending were J. R. Landsborough, Kent Wilson, Charles Beattie, John Matheson, August Matheson, Ambrose Brownell, Clyde Green, Austin Hilsby, Clayton Edwards, LaBrot Edwards, Clark Story, Carl Hodson, Richard Frederick, Harless Ely and Ray Morris.

When Cats Were Scarce. In a curious collection of ancient Welsh laws, dated 943 A. D., appears the following sentence, from which it would appear that cats were rather scarce at that time: "The worth of a kitten until it shall open its eyes is one legal penny; from that time till it shall kill mice, two legal pennies; after it shall kill mice, four legal pence, and so it shall always remain."

CLOTH STREET GOWN

The side and rear views of a charming street costume of brone cloth has been sketched here. The front is plain—the skirt perfectly so, the blouse decorated merely by the crossing of the lace trimmed collar which tucks into the narrow girdle. This collar falls to the waist line in the back. It is trimmed on the outer edge by a broad band of heavy ecru lace. The short sleeve has a wedge shaped piece of the cloth removed and lace is inserted, across which is strapped brone velvet ribbon. The skirt drapery or tunic is gathered near the feet in the back into an oblong piece of the material covered with lace.

FUR FASHIONS.

Tailless Ermine in First Favor For Evening Wear. Fur on the edge of hats, coats and wraps and gowns is much in evidence this winter. Tailless ermine holds first place for evening as trimming on muffs, scarfs and wraps. One dark green velvet coat has a large sailor collar trimmed with black fox. The same fur also finishes the sleeves, while a green velvet hat completes the costume.

Ribbon in all colors has fringe sewed along one edge. This is excellent as a hat trimming and is inexpensive. It comes in several widths.

Large collars in round, pointed or hood effect are much in evidence in new coats. They are usually finished off with long, narrow revers, ending below the waist line.

Sections that are overlapped and sleeves in kimono style that are stitched to the blouse are new features to be found in the pretty waist seen in the cut.

Two of the Most Militant Of British Suffragettes

NOTWITHSTANDING her youth and rather diminutive figure, Miss Christabel Pankhurst is perhaps the most "militant" of all the British suffragettes who have been breaking windows in the hope of persuading parliament to give them the ballot. When forty or more of the "women who were arrested in the recent London riots were sentenced to hard labor in jail the police searched for her as one of the prime instigators of the demonstration, but she eluded arrest. Her mother, however, was captured and sent to prison, where she is still to have refused food, following the precedent set on a former occasion, when the imprisoned suffragettes declared a "hunger strike" and had to be fed by force. Another of the militant leaders, Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, editor of Votes For Women, was held without bail on the charge of conspiracy in the organization of the disturbances which resulted in the destruction of property valued at $20,000.

SPOT HOPS IN GOOD DEMAND AT 38 CENTS

Spot hops are in better demand and from 38c to 38 and one-half cents a pound is being freely offered for good goods. Widner, Dorcus and Seavey are all said to be in the market at the prices quoted. Holders of hops have again strengthened their views and little goods remain. In all hands there is probably not more than 2500 bales in Oregon and not many more in California. In Washington no hops are available at this time.

The amount of hops remaining outside of the hands of brewers is insignificant, considering what even a few large brewers would want when they really enter the market. That the situation in the trade is the strongest of the season to date is now the general opinion of dealers generally.

Spot goods, while firm, are no more in demand than are contracts for 1912. A three years' contract has been written in Mendocino county, California, on the basis of 25c for the first year, 16c for the second and 15c for the third and last term. Growers are not offering contracts freely, and for that reason little business is passing.

Reports from Willamette valley and from Washington yards indicate that the condition is normal.

PORTLAND WINS IN PITCHERS' BATTLE

PORTLAND, April 20, (Special).—With Koestner in the box Portland today won from San Francisco, 2 to 0. Berry and the Portland twirler had everything, but the visiting pitcher weakened a little in the seventh and eighth innings when the runs were made. The Beavers made five hits and the Seals four. Corhan made the only error of the game.

MRS. FROST HOSTESS OF PRETTY BIRTHDAY DINNER

Mrs. A. E. Frost, of Eighth and Madison streets, was the hostess of a pretty birthday dinner at her home on Saturday afternoon, when covers were laid for 14, all of whom were relatives of Mrs. Frost. The table decorations were very pretty, being of bright red egraniums and sweet alyssum. Mrs. Frost was the recipient of many handsome gifts in honor of the occasion. The dining room and living room were decorated in potted hyacinths and ferns.

Present at this family gathering were Mrs. F. W. Johnson, Mrs. C. A. Muir and two children, Glenn and Virginia, of Portland; Mrs. F. R. Andrews and two children, Marion and Francis, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Frost and two children, Melville and Dorothy.

CAPTURE OF WILD ANIMALS IS HAZARDOUS BUSINESS

Few who see wild animals in cages realize the vast amount of trouble, danger and expense necessary to get them there. The greatest danger lies in capturing the animals in their native country. With the Al G. Barnes Big Three Ring Wild Animal Circus which will give two performances in Oregon City on April 29 there are 350 animals most of which were in the forest and jungles of their native countries.

There is no more ticklish or dangerous business than tracking lions in the vast Nubian deserts. The scorching sun pours down with such force that few men can stand it. The effect on the eyes is blinding. There is little or no shade. The wariest and most careful hunter may be tracking an animal, and at the same time be tracked by the very animal he is seeking, who may spring on him at any moment.

For capturing full-grown lions large traps of various forms are used. One trap is square, one the sides lift in gun on a spring like the old fashioned mouse trap. This trap is baited with a piece of fresh meat and as soon as the lion has entered the trap the door shuts down and he is a prisoner. More than a score of the lions with the Al G. Barnes Circus were captured in this manner.

Elephants are generally caught in nooses. A number of men surround the elephant after they have previously formed a circle of fire about the beast. The fire gets closer and closer to the elephant and finally a noose is thrown over his head. He is then secured, tied to a tree and allowed to remain there until quiet. Tame elephants are then brought in to use and appear to be a sort of persuasive in making the huge animals tractable.

In catching snakes various devices are used. One is to set the grass on fire in a circle where it is known that snakes have hiding places. As they rush out they are caught in large nets mounted on wooden hoops to which is attached a large bag.

An Empty Title. Little Willie—I say, pa, what is an empty title? Pa—An empty title, my son, is your mother's way of referring to me as the head of the house when there are visitors present.—Glasgow Times. Much the same sort of thing is done in teaching him to lie down, only in this case a rope with a slip noose is passed around his body at the small of his back, one hind foot and one fore foot are tied and moved out from under him, and then the ropes are pulled gently but firmly until he lies down. An elephant sleeps in a peculiar manner. Nearly all lie on their sides with their trunks curled up, making a peculiar hissing noise at regular intervals, something like the sound of steam issuing from a kettle. The huge beast is not a sound sleeper. He does not take much notice of his keeper prowling around in the night, but should anything strange or unusual take place, two small red lights appear in the elephant's head and the animal is wide awake. At the first sign of danger he trumpets shrilly. In the herd of elephants with the Al G. Barnes Circus there are two more than 100 years old.

Trained Elephants to Be Feature of Circus

With the Al G. Barnes Big Three Ring Wild Animal Circus which will give two performances in Oregon City April 29 there is a herd of elephants which does almost everything with the exception of talking. They operate a barber shop, run a laundry, play tea pins, etc., besides their acrobatic work. Elephants come next to the dog in smartness, but it rather difficult to teach them tricks because of their size.

In learning an elephant to stand up on his hind legs, ropes are attached to each of his fore legs and then attached to a crane high up in the air. At certain words of command they are gently hoisted in the air, leaving the elephant supporting himself on his hind legs. This has to be done
